Best Political Speech.
To Rule the Wind.
Ladies' Queer Pets.
Wales' 7,000,000 Ton Tee.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

SECRETARY MELLON talks about business strictly as business, no thought of politics.

But his optimistic statement on business conditions and future prosperity is the strongest Republican political speech that could have been made.

The strongest instinct in man is self-preservation, and most important to self-preservation is prosperity.

BLOWING 150 miles an hour, a tropical hurricane swept over Porto Rico, doing great damage. At the same time a tornado killed 11 persons, and injured many in Nebraska and South Dakota.

Such tornadoes are more dangerous, far more frequent than earthquakes. But science can foresee a day when high winds will be under man's control.

Their cause is understood. And in days far off, perhaps 50,000 years, perhaps 500,000 years hence, when men control the earth's temperature, transferring surplus heat from the Equator to the Poles, the wind will no more blow "where it listeth," but where man says that it shall blow, and at a speed prescribed by him.

There is nothing fanciful about that.

LADIES that like queer pets to help make them conspicuous will rejoice at news from the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for breeding science, near Berlin. New animals produced by breeding include yellow rats, blue monkeys, and rabbits bearing chinchilla fur, almost genuine. Those rabbits will interest Los Angeles.

The learned Prof. Bauer can do marvelous things with animal life, crossing, inbreeding, etc. But he and all other biologists, with all their science, could not produce one living mosquito.

NAPOLEON in Egypt told his soldiers that twenty centuries were looking down upon them from the top of the Pyramids.

The Prince of Wales in Egypt could address no invading army, although his country fully controls and practically owns Egypt, which is more than Napoleon ever did.

The Prince didn't waste his opportunity, however. He climbed the Great Pyramid, and from the top drove a golf ball that fell to earth, he knew not where.

The "tee" from which that ball was driven is made of 7,000,000 tons of stone, plus the labor of 100,000 men working for 20 years under the lash—a very interesting "drive."

TWO young girls, acting as pickets, and arrested in the textile strike at New Bedford, were promptly expelled from the local "Young Women's Christian Association."

The girls' offense was trying to help fellow workers, and enable wives of workers to take better care of their children. In short, they were doing what the Founder of Christianity Himself would have done.

The amiable ladies in control of that Young Women's Christian Association should strike the name "Christian" from the name of their association, and go ahead as usual.

ANOTHER 4,000,000-share day in Wall Street, with plus signs everywhere in the list.

"Collateral borrowing," euphemism for "borrowing for speculation," increased ninety-six millions for the week, and everybody thought it quite reasonable. Between forty and fifty stocks reached their highest price for this year.

Be careful how you sell them short, they may go higher.

"BIG STEEL" touched 159¾, highest price ever. That surely interested the late Judge Gary, looking down on the steeple of Trinity Church.

Happy the Stock Exchange broker whose untutored mind sees everything going up, including the value of his membership. One seat is sold for $415,000. At that price, the 1,100 exchange seats would be worth $456,500,000. You can't persuade Wall Street that prosperity isn't real.

THE inevitable happens in Paris where ladies will no longer be exhibited with nothing on.

Theatrical managers and the younger set may not know it, but the human race got tired of nakedness more than 100,000 years ago.

Paris revues are presenting young ladies dressed, or at least, covered all over with silk. Undressed ladies bore theater goers.

Nothing could be more hideous than promiscuous nudity. Every Turkish bath proves it.

TWO million five hundred thousand dollars in gold came from London, making business men hope for cheaper money.

That all depends on the Federal Reserve and big banks that have joined in establishing usury as the basis of business in New York's financial circles. It is not pleasant for a usurer having tasted blood to resume obedience to law and decency.

THE owner of "Lucky," a female police dog, wanted to prove that the dog could swim from Albany to New York down the Hudson. The "Cruelty Society" says she mustn't do it.

There should be some society to protect young women from channel swimming and similar exhausting efforts, turning them to raising children. Also something to protect young men from stupid races across the continent, or marathon races, utterly useless, worthless, now that the telegraph and telephone and automobile are invented.

PHILIP CLARK

This is the man for whose killing in Munhall First Christian Church, May 13, Attorney Fayette J. Tyrrell was found guilty today of second degree murder.

WIFE

Mrs. Tyrrell, prominent in the trial, is left alone with her children.

JURY

This is the jury, photographed in one of its recesses, which found Tyrrell guilty today. The court charged the jury yesterday afternoon, the fifth day of the trial. Visiting Judge Robert A. Stotz presided.

FAYETTE J. TYRRELL

This is the man, Fayette J. Tyrrell, who thus faces the penitentiary as a result of the jury's finding.

10-12 YRS.

Ten to 12 years at hard labor is the sentence set by state law for Tyrrell.

WIDOW

The widow, Mrs. Hazel Clark, thus has testified in vain for the defense.

PASTOR

Just before the verdict, the Rev. Mr. J. G. Waters, the church's pastor, had preferred surety of the peace charges against Tyrrell. Sentence on Tyrrell has been deferred, pending a defense appeal.

JAWORSKI GUARDED FROM GANG RESCUE

CLEVELAND, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Heavily armed squads were stationed about the City Hospital today, where Paul Jaworski, killer, payroll robber and prison breaker, lay on a bed awaiting arraignment on a first-degree murder charge.

Detective Inspector Cornelius W. Cody ordered the hospital well guarded in fear that the loyalty of the notorious "Flathead" gang, which Jaworski is alleged to have organized in several cities, might come to the aid of their fallen leader. Every precaution was made to prevent any delivery of the gunman, who a year ago shot his way out of the Allegheny county jail at Pittsburgh, while awaiting sentence for murder.

SNUB PGH. OFFICERS

Allegheny county officials who came here to see Jaworski yesterday were refused admittance to his bedside by Safety Director Edwin D. Barry. He told them they "didn't seem to get much information from Jaworski" when they had him and criticized their failure to take Bertillion records and photographs of John Vasbinder, slayer, who escaped with Jaworski.

Cleveland officials said, however, that were it not for their strong case which may send Jaworski to the electric chair, they would turn him over to Pittsburgh officers.

Jaworski, indicted for first degree murder within 24 hours after he shot and killed one policeman and seriously wounded another officer and a bystander before he was captured Thursday, was to be arraigned today on his hospital bed.

The man hunt continued for Jaworski's companion, Vasbinder, surprised with him in an East Side restaurant the day of the capture. Jaworski continued to refuse to reveal their Cleveland hide out.

Jaworski, however, told officers his gang was in Cleveland, that they had a cache of machine guns, rifles and revolvers and that he had been planning to take them to Pittsburgh for another jail delivery.

'FRAMEUP' NOTES SEIZED

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Detroit police reported today they had visited the home in Hamtramck, Detroit suburb, of Paul Jaworski, notorious gunman shot and captured yesterday in Cleveland, and had found a number of letters from Sam Pallas, Jaworski's brother, now in jail in Pittsburgh.

One letter, the officers said, contained a request that "20 alibi witnesses" be provided "because I expect to get a new trial." Several other letters, all written in Polish, were sent today to Pennsylvania authorities. Pallas is held for aiding Paul to shoot his way out of the Allegheny County Jail in Pittsburgh.

Police and county authorities, disposed to recognize the priority of Pittsburgh's claim on Paul Jaworski, indicated that no attempt would be made at this time to return him here for trial in connection with the Detroit News holdup in which an officer was slain.

2 CITIES FOR SMITH

Gov. Alfred E. Smith had an outstanding majority in the day's returns from Philadelphia and Scranton in the straw vote canvass of Pennsylvania conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Herbert Hoover obtained his usual heavy vote in the returns from the rural counties, and neutralized the urban lead of the Democratic candidate.

P. S. C. LETS BUS RIDERS OVERPAY

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

The rates of fare and the routes of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company must be approved by the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission. It is the duty of this body to see that the public secures fair play from the utility companies which have been given monopolies of public necessities, such as electric power, gas and transportation.

This commission has had the example of known bus fares in other cities before it, but it has allowed an organization which loudly boasts of its harmonious public relations to "over charge" the citizens of Pittsburgh 15 cents every time they pay a quarter to step on a bus.

The elimination of competition is often advisable where public utilities are concerned. A single light company, a single gas company, a single street car company can often give better and cheaper service through being freed from competition.

But it is obvious that a company with a large investment in street cars and tracks would not show much initiative in developing a new form of transportation which might take business from it.

In allowing the Pittsburgh Railways Company to monopolize the bus service here a serious mistake was made.

The remedy will be to allow competition in the future or to compel the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company to abandon its 25-cent fare policy.

BRICK RAIL RATE CUT FROM CLEARFIELD, PA.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—(INS.)—Reduction on the freight rate for fire brick from the Clearfield-Mt. Union district to steel mills at several points in Eastern Pennsylvania is ordered by the Public Service Commission.

Late Heat Hits City

Pittsburgh sweltered in a heat wave today.

The mercury ascended to 84 at noon and indications were that it would go higher—one degree higher, the local weather forecaster opined.

This on the day when the old straw lid is to be supplanted by the iron derby or the soft felt hat.

The heat was was general over the upper Ohio valley and lower lake region. Cooler weather with showers was predicted for tonight, with a drop of 20 degrees.

OLIVER MOROSCO SUED FOR DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Oliver Morosco Mitchel, widely known as Oliver Morosco, stage producer, yesterday was sued for divorce in a complaint filed in Superior Court by his wife, Mrs. Selma Taley Mitchell. She charged extreme cruelty, accused the stage producer of severely beating her on September 7, last, and with deserting her on that date.

20 YRS. PRISON TERM LIMIT

Attorney Fayette J. Tyrrell will not attend the homecoming at the First Christian Church, Munhall, tomorrow.

A jury today in Criminal Court convicted him of second-degree murder because in that church, last May 13, he fired three shots which killed Philip Clark and nullified the divorce suit of the woman who was Clark's wife and Tyrrell's client.

The verdict carries with it a penalty of from 10 to 20 years imprisonment. Tyrrell may be pardoned at any time, at the discretion of the State Pardon Board, which also can grant him a parole at will. Sentence was deferred, pending a motion to be made Tuesday for a new trial.

JURY VOTES 8 TIMES

After eight ballots, the jury reached its verdict at 8:35 o'clock this morning, 18 hours after it had retired yesterday. When court opened an hour later the verdict was reported.

Long before court opened the spectators' seats were filled. Mrs. Tyrrell, with her courage ebbing, sat there white and drawn from a sleepless night; and beside her was Mrs. Hazel Clark, whose name had been linked with Mrs. Tyrrell's husband.

Pale and heavy-lidded, Tyrrell strode jerkily into the room, seated himself and shook hands with his attorney, Thomas Hoffman. A moment later, Clerk Samuel Mazur was asking him to stand up and hear what his future was to be. Tyrrell rose a bit unsteadily, and Clerk Mazur spoke the legal formula:

"Prisoner, look upon the jurors. Jurors, look upon the prisoner. Members of the jury, how say you; have you reached a verdict?"

"We have."

"Who shall answer for you?"

"Our foreman."

Foreman J. M. Mackey rose.

"How say you, is he guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty of murder in the second degree," was the answer, in a strained, metallic tone.

Tyrrell recoiled as though from a physical blow, then drooped. But

DAPPER PRISONERS LEAD DEATH CAR HUNT

Set on confirming the "confession" of John F. Meckley, of Wilkinsburg, before he has a chance to deny the killing of Dr. Harry R. Dapper, Carrick physician, city detectives and state police are in Detroit today, tracing the dead physician's automobile which Meckley, in his story of the killing, said he disposed of in that city.

Lieut. Edward O'Rourke, of the automobile squad, and Detectives Harry Foster and George Franz, in company with Sergt. I. D. Kelley of the state police and two of Kelley's men, reached Detroit early today.

SUSPECTS TO POINT WAY

In their company, and carefully guarded, are Meckley and Ralph Maratta, of Lowell street, who promised to take the sleuths to the man who purchased the stolen automobile from them for $250.

Detectives are of the opinion that Meckley has told the truth and if not continually reminded that he must tell all, he might change his story. However, Maratta, also has promised to lead the detectives to the alleged "fence," who, local authorities believe, has been disposing of numerous cars which the young men stole here.

Although Assistant Chief of County Detectives Harry Cochran believed the story of Meckley to be a "lot of hokum," never-the-less he sent two of his men along to Detroit with the city police to search for the missing car. He believes that

HORNSBY AND M'GRAW DENY BETTING

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—Arlington race track officials today ordered a sweeping investigation into the activities of tipsters here in an effort to unearth turf touts said to be responsible for the alleged Arlington betting scandal. The scandal involved the names of Jockey E. C. Allen, O. L. Foster, his contract employer, and two prominent National League baseball chieftains.

At a special meeting of the Arlington stewards last night, Allen was completely vindicated of all complicity in the alleged topster ring. The charges upon which the jockey was haled before the turf tribunal were that he transmitted information on "fixed races" to persons high in baseball circles.

HUNT IMPOSTER

Immediately following the exoneration of Jockey Allen, the Illinois Racing Association began a search for the man who impersonated him in the tipping deals and a young woman who posed as his wife.

Roger Hornsby, manager of the Boston Braves, and John McGraw, New York Giants chieftain, whose names were drawn into the investigation when Allen received a letter from the Illinois Bell Telephone Company for long distance toll calls totaling $559, wired emphatic denials to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball mogul, that they had ever received racing tips from Allen.

In a letter from the telephone company, it was stated that the calls were made during the months of June and July and that they were mostly to Hornsby and McGraw.

Uniontown Folk Out to Land More Trade

Not content with her rich coal resources, which will not be exhausted for a hundred years, Uniontown is going after new industries.

Ketchup and soup manufacturers were asked to establish plants. "Show us that tomatoes can be grown in Fayette county," they said. As a test, five farmers planted an acre each in tomatoes.

C. A. Stark of Vanderbilt, already has picked more than 1,000 bushels of tomatoes from his acre, and is still picking. The average commercial yield per acre is 263 bushels.

Uniontown has $3,500,000 worth of new buildings. It has a new college, a new public library, a new court house. A recent survey showed 157 new homes going up in the city and its environs. A new road, which probably will be finished within a year, will bring the city within 17 miles of Pittsburgh.

There will be a page of news and pictures of Uniontown in The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph on Sunday.

Remy Kremer and Red Lucas are down on the books for a slab fight this afternoon.

CLUBS PLEDGE TO OBEY LAW, PROSECUTOR SAYS

MERCER, Pa., Sept. 15.—There is every indication that injunction proceedings instituted by District Attorney Leo McKay against nine social clubs of Mercer county may terminate at their hearing in a love feast. McKay says one club has offered him the key, that he may visit it at will; that another is going out of business, and that still others, through their officers, have assured him of their intent to obey the law. The clubs include the Moose and Eagles of Sharon, Farrell and Greenville; the German Home of Farrell and Mannerchor of Sharon. The hearings on the injunctions are set for September 17.

TYRRELL GUILTY IN 2ND DEGREE

his expression never changed.

WOMEN IN TEARS

Mrs. Tyrrell and Mrs. Clark clenched hands and shared tears of grief. Their cheeks moistened as they sat limply while Judge Robert Stotz thanked the jury and remanded Tyrrell, then left the courtroom together. Mrs. Tyrrell went to the jail to comfort Tyrrell and then home, to break the news to their six children.

The jury was equally divided on its first ballot between acquittal and a first-degree verdict, according to several of the members. Through the night, while Tyrrell sat sleepless in his cell, they argued. Then, as dawn came, they halted for breakfast, finished their coffee and voted unanimously.

PASTOR DROPS CHARGE

The Rev. J. D. Waters, Tyrrell's pastor, went to the district attorney's office when the brief session of court ended and withdrew surety of the peace proceedings he had instituted against his Sunday school superintendent.

The suit no longer seemed necessary to the Rev. Waters, since Tyrrell will be in jail when the pastor tomorrow conducts the homecoming service, he announced to newspaper men Wednesday while the trial was at its height. The Rev. Waters entered the action because, according to his testimony, Tyrrell had threatened him, and he believed there might be an acquittal.

PLEADED SELF-DEFENSE

Tyrrell took Clark's life in the auditorium of the church a few minutes before services were scheduled to start on Sunday morning, May 13—Mother's Day. At the trial, which began last Monday, Tyrrell, lawyer, Sunday school superintendent and father of six children, pleaded that he had acted in self-defense. Clark, mill worker and estranged husband, whose wife was suing for divorce through Lawyer Tyrrell, had made for him with, Tyrrell thought, a revolver in his hand.

Much importance was attached by Assistant District Attorney John Haggerty to the argument in the study of Pastor J. D. Waters a few minutes before the murder and to a telephone conversation between Tyrrell and Thomas R. Thompson, a member of the church board, the night before the killing. Tyrrell testified that Thompson had warned him, "Clark is on the warpath. You had better come prepared."

Thompson denied giving this warning, and both he and Pastor Waters testified that in the church study Tyrrell had displayed his revolver and threatened to challenge Clark—this a few minutes before the killing.

Tyrrell's defense was the story of a church-going, family man, who lived in fear of his life from the constant threats made by a man whose wife had left him and was asking the courts for her freedom.

Mrs. Hazel Clark, the widow, was one of the defense's chief witnesses. She testified of threats which her husband had made to her on the life of her lawyer and she told of how unbearable Clark had made her life.

Tyrrell Can Win Parole Any Time

Second degree murder is punishable by imprisonment for a minimum of 10 years and a maximum of 20 years. According to the District Attorney's office, however, Fayette J. Tyrrell, found guilty in the second degree for the murder of Philip Clark in the First Christian Church, Munhall, last May 13, may be paroled at any time in the discretion of the State Pardon Board. A pardon, which in addition to freedom would restore the rights of citizenship, also may be granted at any time.

WOODVILLE MAN ROBBED; YOUNG NEGRO ACCUSED

Unable to furnish bond, Carl Coleman, 20, a Negro of Oakdale, was committed to jail last night after he had been held for court on a charge of larceny by Justice of the Peace Philip Hillen, of Heidelberg. He is accused of having attacked John Carlton, 65, of the Woodville county home, last week, robbing him of $32.75.

CITIES BOOST SMITH

the two cities. Scranton voters have shown a strong liking for Smith since its returns were filed, beginning a few days ago.

Philadelphia has been giving the Democratic candidate strong support, but recent returns have more frequently given Hoover a lead in that city.

Women voters in both cities have been strongly supporting both candidates.

The totals to date in the Pennsylvania canvass, conducted in connection with the poll of the country by the Hearst papers, are: Hoover 15,121, including 10,316 men and 4,805 women; Smith 11,303, including 7,527 men and 3,781 women.

The electors reporting, who voted in 1924, divided their ballots as follows: Coolidge 18,666, including 12,596 men and 6,070 women; Davis 2,192, including 1,689 men and 503 women; LaFollette 1,814.

FRAUD SUSPECT TAKEN FIVE YEARS AFTER DEAL

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 15.—Five years ago R. R. Aitken, manager of a Fifth avenue cafe, Pittsburgh, was alleged to have defrauded Harry Mitchell of Uniontown out of $2,600. Aitken arrested in Pittsburgh, was brought to jail here yesterday on a charge of fraudulent conversion.

He is said to have started a corner of the potato market in Fayette county in 1923 and when Uniontown persons became involved he left suddenly without making a settlement.

Say Maid Aided Robber

Dorothy Shearly, alias Helen Davis, of Kittanning, got a job Thursday, left the following day with approximately $3,000 worth of jewelry and wearing apparel, according to city detectives, and found herself in jail today while police search for an alleged male accomplice.

Dorothy applied to Abe Schiner, 2336 Shady avenue, for a job as a domestic. During the absence of the family on Friday, Schiner told police, the accomplice came to the house with a truck and carted away the loot.

BRAUN HEADS BACKERS OF ROAD BOND ISSUE

HARRISBURG, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Organization of the Pennsylvania Good Roads Association to sponsor the $50,000,000 highway bond issue amendment to be voted on in November is announced here. Arthur E. Braun, of Pittsburgh, is president, and other officers are L. W. Snyder and Francis J. Hall, both of Harrisburg, secretary and treasurer respectively. Headquarters have been established here.

Every Pittsburgh Housewife should attend The Sun-Telegraph Cooking School in Memorial Hall, Sept. 19, 20, 21. Interesting lectures and demonstrations in cooking and home economics.

MINERS' RELIEF FUNDS PROBED BY POSTOFFICE

Seeking an audit of the books of the National Miners' Relief Committee to determine whether the committee is diverting funds to channels, other than relief work, the Postoffice Department here today will seek a subpena for the records of the committee. Attorneys acting on behalf of Postoffice Inspector George V. Craighead will go into court and seek such a writ today.

A subpena was issued yesterday and officials of the department sent to the committee headquarters in the Lyceum building, Penn avenue. No action was taken, however, because Judge F. P. Schoonmaker revoked the subpena after representatives of the committee protested because of legal technicalities.

The subpena issued yesterday directed Alfred Wagenknecht, relief director, to produce the books and papers before the grand jury. Violations of the postal laws and other criminal statues were alleged. The delay of one day in serving a paper that is technically correct will mean that the records will not be brought before a grand jury for some time, as the Pittsburgh jury was dismissed yesterday. A new grand jury will begin work Monday in Erie.

HUNT DAPPER DEATH CAR

the key to the entire mystery lies in the locating of the automobile.

OFFICERS DISAGREE

Other members of the county detective force who have been at work on the case and attaches to the District Attorney's office who have questioned witnesses in efforts to throw light on the mystery, also believe the story to be untrue. However the members of the automobile squad believe that the attitude of the county force is just evidence of existing "sour grapes" because they had nothing to do in making the arrests.

While O'Rourke and two of his men are in Detroit, other members of the automobile squad are busy running down the list of stores the Meckley gang are said to have robbed. In addition to Meckley and Maratta there are three others under arrest. They are Frank Maratta, a brother of Ralph; LeRoy Madden and Eddie McCallin, all of the East End district. All admit, police say, to participating in many drug store robberies and automobile thefts. They also admit the cars were sold in Detroit.

Right Hand Lost, Left Trained by Art Student

DOVER, O., Sept. 15.—Undaunted by an accident last Saturday in a manufacturing plant here in which he lost four fingers of his right hand, George Kaderly, 18, Winfield, has already trained his left hand sufficiently to produce two pencil drawings which are on exhibition here.

George went to work last Friday to earn money to pay his tuition fee at a Cleveland art school.

TO ARGUE ROSS TWP. MERGER

A hearing was held before Judge James H. Gray yesterday on an appeal filed by opponents to the proposed annexation of a part of Ross township to the City of Pittsburgh.

Technical points regardig the status of signers to the petition for annexation were withdrawn and the matter simmered down to a question of the constitutionality of the Act of 1874 under which annexation is proposed. Under this procedure 60 per cent of the residents of the district had petitioned for annexation on July 16 and on July 29 the city council had passed an ordinance sanctioning the move.

The appeal was filed August 2. Paul Hughes secretary of the Ross township school board, testified yesterday that the township had just authorized a $100,000 bond issue for school purposes, and said that taking part of the township into the city would work hardship on the remaining taxpayers.

Attorney Ralph Smith represent the annexationists and Attorney John E. Winner the opponents.

Fire Razes Up-State Town

WATTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—The entire business district of Wattsburg, an Erie county town of 500 inhabitants, was burned last evening with a loss estimated at upward of $150,000. The fire had its origin in an overturned oil stove in a residence, and 12 stores and four homes were leveled before the flames were brought under control. Several persons were slightly burned.

Wattsburg has no fire department, and fire companies were summoned from North East, Waterford, Union City, Corry, Erie and Clymer, N. Y. The fire apparatus sent from all towns except Erie carried only chemicals, which were soon exhausted. An Erie pumper took water from French creek after several wells had been pumped dry. Bucket brigades also combatted the flames.

The fire started in the home of Mrs. Jane Marts, 88, who tipped over an oil stove while preparing a meal. The Marts home was soon enveloped in flames, which spread across the streeet to the Odd Fellows' Hall and the home of C. W. Eastman. Buildings up and down the street then took fire.

The fire was brought under control after three hours of intense effort on the part of the various fire companies, but smoldering embers remained over the entire area burned. The flames were halted about 30 feet from two gasoline service stations.

The buildings burned included the postoffice and the Wattsburg Inn. Most of the structures razed were of wood, and none was more than two stories in height.

While at play on Labor Day, a piece of iron fell on his foot and injured one of his toes. He was taken to Homestead Hospital Thursday and died this morning.

ALLEGED KNIFE WIELDER SUBDUED BY POLICEMAN

Overpowered by Lieut. William Walsh and Patrolman Albert Leckenby after, they say, he tried to stab them, Joseph Sekon, 27, of Mingo Junction, O., was arrested at Liberty avenue and Ferry street last night. The officers said Sekon had acted suspiciously, and when they attempted to question him he lunged at them with a knife.

GRANGE HALL PICTURED BY VARI-COLORED SEEDS

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Sept. 15.—Colerian Grange won first prize in the Belmont county fair's grange exhibits with a picture of its new hall made of seeds shellacked to a board. Different colors of seeds gave the appearance of a tapestry picture. William Kreiger, of Colerain, made the novel exhibit.

CARS' VICTIMS ASK $35,000

Struck by a street car as it rounded a curve—the same car from which they had alighted—James H. Lyons and his wife, Ella N. Lyons, West View, injured in the accident at Balph and Lincoln avenues, Bellevue, August 3, have sued the Pittsburgh Railways Company for $30,000 damages.

They claim that they left the car but did not have opportunity to reach the sidewalk because of an automobile crowding in on them, and when the street car rounded the curve it threw both of them against an automobile.

PORTO RICO FACED BY FAMINE

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Sept. 15.—The specter of famine stalked through the streets of this city today adding its dread to the dire plight of thousands made homeless by the worst tropical storm ever suffered by Porto Rico.

Continued torrential rains since the passing of the wind are spoiling whatever stores of food remained after the tornado's visitation. In addition, the water supply of the city is badly disorganized and in some sections not functioning at all.

It is feared that these conditions may cause disease among the homeless victims of the storm. According to Thomas E. Benner, chancellor of the University of Porto Rico, the meagre food supply on hand will last only for a few days. In cable dispatches to the United States he entreated immediate aid from all sources.

The tornado, now sweeping northward, may hit the coast of Florida today, it is feared. Several vessels in its path have not been heard from, but officials of the companies owning them are not anxious. However, there is some anxiety for the safety of Franz Romer, the German seaman, who crossed the Atlantic in a canoe and is now en route from this city to Florida in his frail craft.

Scarcely a house in the city can be said to have escaped damage. It is estimated that 80 per cent of the population is homeless. Business is at a standstill and communication between the city and other parts of the island continues difficult.

SMITH TO SEE MORE OF WEST

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Gov. Smith broadened the scope of his western tour today.

Instead of stopping only at the half dozen large cities of the West where he is scheduled to deliver major speeches, the Democratic nominee will stop as well at a score of smaller towns in Nebraska. The wheat farmers of Kansas and the oil workers of Oklahoma all will have an opportunity to see—and possibly hear—the New York Governor.

The itinerary of the Governor's western tour has been completely revised. None of the major dates has been changed, but there have been added a score of stops for his special train which were not in the original schedule made public 10 days ago.

Gov. Smith has yielded to the importunities of his campaign managers that there is a real chance of striking a telling blow in the grain belt and the revamped schedule is the result.

Gov. Smith will make three stops in Nebraska, 14 in Kansas, three in Oklahoma and four in Colorado, under the revised schedule announced today.

Kansas is the native state of Senator Charles Curtis, the Republican vice presidential nominee. It is traditionally Republican, being one of the few grain belt states that returned a really handsome majority for the Coolidge-Dawes ticket in 1924. Yet the Democrats cannot forget that Woodrow Wilson carried it in 1912, and again in 1916.

'DINGER' WAITS AT GREENSBURG

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—William (Dinger) Daugherty, legless and one-armed flying assessor of Wetzel county, West Virginia, landed here last night en route from Roosevelt Field, New York, to his home at New Martinsville, W. Va. He flew from Gettysburg, Pa., to Greensburg in 2 hours, 5 minutes.

Daugherty originally went to Roosevelt Field with the intention of attempting a trans-Atlantic flight, but his plans did not mature. He said here that he had hopes of making an attempt to cross the Atlantic by air next year.

Those County Road Signs! :-: Whither Would You Go, Tourist? :-: Stay on State Roads

STATE

State Highway road markings (above) put to shame the system employed by the Allegheny county road department.

DETOUR!

A few danger signs have been placed from time to time along county roads. At this junction the state has placed three markers, even though Baldwin road is only a temporary state detour.

WHERE?

Even the county's direction signs have been neglected. We can't tell you where this is, because it was impossible to read the sign.

JUST BROKEN

County road danger signs when broken are not replaced. For the school warning at the base here, there is no school!

NEED PAINT!

School warnings are important, but the county road department evidently thinks otherwise. The above sign is so faded that it is barely legible. These signs never have been repainted since placed four or five years ago, road caretakers say.

CHANGED

Even when a warning is knocked askew it oftimes remains that way. This sign at Cochran and Bower Hill roads has been in this position for sometimes, residents say.

HAZARD?

At Cochran and Woodville roads, both heavily traveled, the reflector warning set up last year has been knocked down. Still crooked.

STAGE AND SCREEN ACTIVITIES DETAILED IN PICTURES AND GOSSIP ABOUT PLAYERS

Unknown Lad From Abroad Draws Prize Assignment as Leading Man for Clara Bow

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 15.

THERE must be a scarcity of eligible men in Hollywood. At least of men sufficiently young, handsome, dashing, etc., to play opposite Clara Bow. They have imported a youngster from across the seas to be Clara's hero in her new photo drama, "Three Week Ends." The boy's name is Robert Castle and it seems that he has done some film work abroad. But, needless to say, he has never had an opportunity such as he gets by being cast as Clara's leading man. He's 23 years old.

Jimmy Hall was originally scheduled to play the part, following his triumph in "The Fleet's In." But now James has been transferred to "The Canary Murder Case," the casting of which is as much of a mystery as the plot of the story is said to be.

Lilyan Tashman, one of the very cleverest women in the cinema, will move her makeup box in a few days. Lilyan, always in demand, has been signed for a featured role in "Hardboiled," the Ralph Ince film in which Sally O'Neil will star. They've cast young Donald Reed as Sally's leading man.

Jack Holt is rapidly recovering from the "blue" eye he received in a mixup with two men who attempted the theft of some of the accessories from his motor car. The crooks were caught, but not until after one had crowned Jack with an improvised blackjack.

Another "ill-and-injured" note is that Lina Basquette has left the hospital, having undergone two successful operations at one time. Lina will rest for a couple of weeks at her home before beginning her next picture. Truckloads of flowers arrive hourly—almost.

Hollywood is as far from Los Angeles as Brooklyn is from New York—and equally remote. The film people seldom get "down town," a fact which was strikingly evidenced when Renee Adoree, in a divorce action against the husband she wed last year, testified that William S. Gill, the man in question, refused to drive her home from L. A. and that in trying to find her way through the maze of streets she lost her way and stayed lost for hours. Hollywood is quite content to play in its own back yard.

Director Clarence Brown has a pet superstition which causes him to play some minor role in each of his pictures. Watch carefully when you see "A Woman of Affairs," and you will see Director Brown as the taxicab driver who pilots Jack Golden through London's Mayfair.

Gus Edwards, here to help make sound films for Metro, declares he's happy to be out where he can get his orange juice in the original package. Gus, who discovered Lila Lee back in the days when she was "Cuddles," believes he has another find in a flashing Spanish dancer named Armida. Gus says that as far as the "yellies" are concerned she'll be the whole show.

Nils Asther's fan mail has increased from eight to 800 letters within a few months. Now they're buzzin' around that Nils will be as big a bet as John Gilbert a year or two from now.

Sojin, the Oriental thespian, has been cast in one of his usual roles in "Tropic Madness" and will contribute a few thrills and shivers, as he always does.

Pauline Garon, whom everyone calls "Polly," is taking another fling at the stage in a local production of "Tarnish," in which Virginia Valli and Albert Gran, two more movie deserters, also will appear. Pauline plays the role of the manicure girl, important in the story.

Table-tripping at the "Momart," I saw Lily Damita, very Parisienne and blonde, lunching with Mama while every man in the place looked on in envy . . . Ruth Roland, Hollywood's millionaire actress, entertaining a half-dozen girl friends . . . Joy Auburn talking with Tom Mix about his next film, in which Joy is to be leading woman . . . Mrs. Bob Armstrong gradually losing her glorious coat of Santa Monica tan . . . Jane Winton in a stunning "creation" and hurrying off to the studio where she is playing in "Nothing to Wear" . . . Alma Rubens bowing to a dozen friends . . . Sally Eilers, whom everyone had married to Matty Kemp, giving the customers a thrill with a new boy friend and a new diamond ring . . . Alice White, with a big, woolly toy dog under her arm . . . Jack Munhall on his way to the air races.

Every Pittsburgh Housewife should attend The Sun-Telegraph Cooking School in Memorial Hall, Sept. 19, 20, 21. Interesting lectures and demonstrations in cooking and home economics.

MUSICAL PLAY IN BILLS

Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita," coming Monday to the Nixon, has a company including Ethelind Terry, J. Harold Murray, Bert Wheeler, Robert Woosley, Vincent Serrano, Alfred James, Marie Dayne, Eunice Holmes, Marie Lambert, the Albertina Rasch dancers and 100 glorified Ziegfeld beauties.

The Davis is to reopen Monday with six acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville and screen attractions, the feature of which will be Ford Sterling in "Chicken a la King." Among the stage acts will be the Libby Dancers.

"Teeing Off," which spoofs at the modern golf mania, is the title of the stage show in the Penn next week. It features Rome and Dunn, Earl La Vere, Duffin and Draper, Alice Wellman and the Gamby-Hale Girls.

Among the actors appearing in the cast of "Four Sons," the Fox-Movietone sound feature which comes to the Aldine next week, are Archduke Leopold of Austria and Ferdinand Schumann-Heink, son of Madame Schumann-Heink. Both were engaged specially to appear in this picture.

Hindu Wassau, dancer and singer of topical songs, is the featured player in "Hindu Belles" next week's burlesque in the Academy.

Vaudeville in the Harris Theater next week will include Jack DeBeil and Company in "Twins." The two screen features will be "The Night Bird," with Reginald Denny, and Rex Bell in "The Cowboy Kid."

Vaudeville in the Sheridan Square next week will include Sandy Shore, Scotland's character entertainer. The two screen features will be Reginald Denny in "The Night Bird" and Lionel Barrymore in "Roadhouse."

Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel in "Glorious Betsy," talking picture with synchronized music score, is the Regent feature, beginning today.

Arapahoe, Okla.—"I want to tell you just what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was in bad health for about six years. My nerves were all to pieces. I could not sleep and wasn't able to do my housework. Now I feel so much better! I sleep like a baby. I can do all my housework, washing and ironing and feel fine all the time. I help my husband some in the field, too, so you see we have something to praise the Vegetable Compound for. I will gladly answer all letters asking about the Lydia E. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LOVE BEGETS LOVE

By KETURAH VAN TYLE

MARJORIE WILLIAMS stretched lazily, luxuriating in the knowledge that she needn't leave her comfortable bed for some hours yet. It was Tuesday, her short day in the hotel office.

Marjorie was alone in the world. She was private secretary to the manager of a family hotel in Chicago's fashionable North Side and lived there. She ate her meals wherever she happened to be, except breakfast, which she invariably had sent up to her room from the cafe of the hotel, together with the morning paper.

She was always interested in society news. Many of the people mentioned in the social column she knew by sight. The hotel was on the edge of Chicago's famous Gold Coast, and frequently numbered among its transcient guests, social favorites whose homes were in the hands of decorators, whose families were abroad, or who, for some like reason, chose to live "out" for a few weeks at a time.

On this particular Tuesday morning, Marjorie opened her paper and was more stirred than she cared to admit, even to herself, by the announcement of Roger Morton's engagement to Sylvia Strang. This appeared among the society notes.

Morton had been maintaining a suite in the hotel for some time and Marjorie had grown to know him rather well. He had formed a habit of stopping for a word with her when he was passing in or out; had a quiet way of giving to her any little order which he wished executed.

Their relationship was too vague to be called friendship yet, it was something much more pleasant than just an ordinary business contact. Marjorie was at a loss to explain the sudden sinking of heart she felt this morning when she saw the announcement of his engagement.

Marjorie knew Sylvia Strang by sight and repuation and wondered how she could have inveigled an honest, whole-souled man like Morton into an engagement with a person so exactly his opposite.

When Morton came through the revolving door of the lobby about 4 that afternoon and headed directly for her desk, Marjorie quickly smothered the flurry of pleasure that swept over her at the sight of him. He was graver than usual as he leaned over her desk and asked in an undertone if he might speak to her alone in the writing room.

"Miss Williams," he said abruptly, as soon as they were alone, "you probably will be surprised at what I am about to ask of you but I want to assure you that it is not a practical joke. I am in deadly earnest and will do everything in my power to see that nothing but benefit comes to you through your part of the contract, that is, providing you accept its terms."

"Mr. Morton! I—I don't understand!"

"You probably won't, even after I've told you. I want you to marry me—now—within an hour. You will be wedding a failure as you'll see by tomorrow's papers. I shall pay you a salary as my wife but our relations must remani exactly as they are now. You may retain your present position or resign and live on your salary. I mean it to be ample for that."

For a moment Marjorie's faculties almost refused to function; then suddenly she realized that Roger Morton was asking her to be what only that morning she had wished she might be—his wife; realized in a way she hadn't quite before, that her feeling for him was something more than mere friendship. Her brain was in a chaotic whirl.

"Mr. Morton," she finally answered, voicing her thoughts verbatim, "your plan is tempting. I'm alone in the world with nobody to provide for against old age except myself. Extra money is a great inducement. I—I think I'm willing to do what you ask providing I may keep my place here."

"As you wish," he said, still sober and thoughtful. "I'm very grateful to you, Miss Williams."

They were married in a judge's office within an hour. Marjorie returned immediately to her duties at the hotel, Morton to his suite on an upper floor. She did not see her new husband until the following day about noon, when Sylvia Strang strolled languidly into the hotel and asked Marjorie, who happened to be at the clerk's desk to summon Roger Morton from his rooms immediately.

When Morton left the elevator and came across the lobby, Marjorie was thrilled with pride to think this man was her husband. She wondered vaguely if she ever would have the courage to tell him so.

She saw him meet Miss Strang, courteously, but with no exhibition of intimacy; in the writing room which was just beyond the office Marjorie heard the woman denounce Roger for engaging himself to her when he must have known he was on the verge of failure; heard her break that engagement and say that so far as she was concerned Roger Morton would remain a bachelor for the remainder of his days. Then Marjorie's name was called. Wonderingly she went into the writing room and was presented to Miss Strang proudly as Roger Morton's wife.

"Good Lord!" Miss Strang shrilled, all her elegance and poise slipping from her like a cloak. "You've fallen lower than I thought, Roger! Married to a common working girl! I wish you joy of your—your bourgeoise and you, young woman, or your—your bankrupt!"

Marjorie was still staring after Miss Strang, who had sailed majestically out of the hotel when she became aware that Morton was speaking to her.

"Miss Williams—Marjorie," she heard him say, "I'm terribly sorry to have subjected you to such an outburst. You are entitled to an explanation. My engagement to Miss Strang was the outgrowth of an arrangement long ago between our parents. I was bound to her ethically, but I realized that neither of us loved the other. I was sure what her attitude would be if she ever were to discover that marriage with me would not augment her financial or social power; so I arranged the failure."

"But—but why did you think you must test her at the expense of a totally disinterested party like me?" Marjorie asked, her soft brown eyes filling with tears.

"Are you then so disinterested, Marjorie?" Morton said, reaching for her hand. "You may not have gussed it but I have been in love with you for months. I wasn't testing Slyvia. I was taking the only way to rid myself of her that I knew. If the thought of being my wife is distasteful to you or you are in love with someone else, I'll go away at once and you can arrange to quietly divorce me on the grounds of desertion. The alimony I shall settle upon you will compensate in some small measure for the annoyance I have caused you. Love begets love, so they say. I have been hoping that I could in time teach you to care for me. Is there a single ray of hope?"

Marjorie raised her glowing face to her husband's and answered in low vibrant tones, as she hid against his shoulder.

"You couldn't teach me to care for you. I—I've done that since long before you asked me to marry you although I don't think I fully realized it myself until I read the announcement of your engagement to Miss Strang in yesterday morning's paper."

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Golf to Displace Horses as Chief Topic of Interest as Many Pittsburghers Prepare for Tournament

HORSES may be the chief topic of interest around here just now, but in a little more than a week I think golf will take its place as of paramount importance for a while. I know, at least, that quite a few of our local society folks are going to be down at Hot Springs, Va., at the same time the women's amateur golf championship tournament is played. The tournament begins a week from Monday, September 24, and will continue throughout the week, to be played over the Cascades course.

Some of those who will join the Pittsburgh colony at the Springs are the William G. Costins, Mr. and Mrs. George Phelps Rose, the Howard Hale McClintics and Mr. and Mrs. B. Preston Schoyer. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney S. Liggett, with Betty and Laura, have already motored down to the Springs.

Some local people, though, who have been down there for a while, have decided not to stay for the tournament and are already back home again. Mary Barbara Shiras, for instance, has returned to the city, and so have the H. Vaughn Blaxters, with Dorothy and H. Vaughn Blaxter, Jr.

THE very first of last winter's debutantes to announce her engagement is Marie Boggs McBride. Marie's father and mother, the William McBrides, of Grant street, Sewickley, are announcing today her betrothal to Van-Lear Perry Shriver, Jr., son of the Van-Lear Perry Shrivers, of Woodland road, Sewickley.

Marie, you remember, came out last November at a tea which her mother gave for her in the Edgeworth Club, and then in December her parents gave a large ball in the University Club. She is an Ogontz School girl and the winter before she came out she spent in Europe.

Mr. Law will have Allen J. Lynch as his best man and the ushers will be William W. Warren and Charles T. Siebert, Jr.

The ceremony will be performed at home by the Rev. Dr. Carl Wallace Petty, pastor of the First Baptist Church. The hour chosen is 7:30 o'clock, I believe. The young Mr. and Mrs. Law will live in Philadelphia, and expect to be at home there after November 1.

On the night before the wedding, Louise's brother-in-law and sister, the Sieberts, will give a dinner supplementing the rehearsal.

MEAT DEALERS ADMIT BUTCHERING SICK COW

UNIONTOWN, PA., Sept. 15.—Charges of butchering a cow that had been sick for two weeks yesterday brought a plea of guilty from John Messek and Julius Spitzler, two meat dealers. Sentence was postponed until next week. The cow suffered an injury to her leg and became ill. It was then slaughtered.

SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Fandom Behind Landis in Probing of Charges Against McGraw and Hornsby. Baseball Must Have No Contact With Gambling—Grimes Breaks Own Record. Giants Equal Double-Header Mark.

SUPPORTERS of clean baseball and the diamond sport's well-wishers everywhere will be solidly behind Commissioner K. M. Landis in any investigation he may make of the charges that Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants, and Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Braves have been betting on horse races.

Judge Landis.

It is no secret that both pilots were in the habit of laying frequent wagers on turf events in past years, but last winter a clause was written into the rules of organized baseball prohibiting such betting by managers or players, and if McGraw and Hornsby have since been guilty of continuing the practice the commissioner should lose no time in making examples of them.

IF BASEBALL is to remain clean it must be kept free from the taint of any form of betting by those engaged in it. The National pastime has suffered in the past from contact with the slimy hand of gambling, and it will be no easy matter for it to retain public confidence if the evil is not stamped out.

Even though it was on a sport other than baseball itself that the wagers are reported to have been made, the danger of disastrous results is not lessened. Players might naturally be expected to follow the example of their managers, and it isn't hard to see that possible debts resulting from unsuccessful risks might leave the way open for unscrupulous outside gamblers to attempt some tampering with weak diamond athletes under financial obligations to them.

UNDER the circumstances, Commissioner Landis should probe the charges to the bottom, and either keep baseball above suspicion by clearing the names of the accused men if he finds them innocent, or, if he finds them guilty, punish them in a manner that will act as permanent deterrent to others.

It is a matter not to be passed over lightly. No man in baseball is too big to be permitted to violate with impunity such an important rule as the measure that prohibits gambling on horse races. The life of the turf sport depends upon betting—the life of baseball depends upon its being kept free from it.

Rogers Hornsby

THE Pirates helped their first-division chances by winning the first number of the two-game series with the Reds yesterday, and they will be sitting pretty safe if they can repeat the trick in the final contest of the Pittsburgh season this afternoon. Manager Bush will take his fourth-placers East tonight to finish the season on the road with a string of 14 games—three in New York, four in Philadelphia, four in Boston and three in Brooklyn. All the players except Eddie Mulligan and a young pitcher who has been used in batting practice will be taken on th final jaunt.

BURLEIGH GRIMES tied Larry Benton of the Giants for the leadership in games won when he hung up his twenty-fourth victory of the year yesterday. The Pirate spitball star now needs only one more win to attain the goal of 25 victories, and as he will pitch at least four games on the Eastern trip the chances will be all in favor of his getting it.

Grimes broke his own record in his latest victory, as this is the first time in his career that he ever won 24 games in a season. He won 23 in 1914 for Richmond, and for Brooklyn he registered 23 in 1920, 22 in 1921 and 1924, and 21 in 1923, but he never before succeeded in piling up his present total.

PUBLISHED reports that the Giants equaled the modern baseball record for winning successive double-headers when they captured three straight bargain bills in Boston, and that they set a new mark for all time when they won their fourth consecutive twin card yesterday, were erroneous.

John McGraw.

The New York team only equaled the record when they won two games in one afternoon yesterday for the fourth time in a row, a feat that lifted them to within one game of the Cards and first place. The mark is such a modern one, too, that it was established only four years ago.

Wilbert Robinson's Brooklyn club set the record when it won four straight dual engagements in 1924. On September 1 of that year the Robins beat the Phillies twice, 7 to 2 and 6 to 3; on September 2 they downed the same club two more times, 12 to 9 and 4 to 3; on September 3 they again gave the Quakers a double lacing, 7 to 6 and 7 to 0, and on September 4 they handed Boston two defeats, 5 to 1 and 3 to 1. All eight games were played away from home, and formed part of a winning streak that was not interrupted until the Dodgers had won 15 consecutive contests.

KREMER OPPOSES LUCAS IN BOX

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THERE is a threat of football in the announcement that the last baseball game of the season at Forbes Field is booked for this afternoon. The Pirates, on top of their victory over the Reds yesterday, will take on the Rhinelanders again toady. The game begins at 3 o'clock.

The finale of the Oakland Orchard is expected to bring Remy Kremer and Red Lucas together on Fogarty Knoll. Frenchy has been pitching clever ball of late, but if the Cincinnati sorrel-top is up to his average form against the Pirates, Kremer will have to step on the gas to get a decision.

After turning over their home uniforms to Trainer Chauff Asten, the Pirates will relax a bit and then head for New York. On the Polo Grounds tomorrow afternoon, the Buccos will jump off on their last Eastern invasion and before they return home the curtain will have dropped on the season's play. Just two more weeks of action is on the schedule, the Pirates to wind up their affairs in Brooklyn two weeks from today.

GRIMES' TWENTY-FOURTH

Burleigh Grimes recorded his twenty-fourth triumph of the season as the Pirates downed the Reds yesterday, 4 to 1. Grimes had slab opposition in Eppa Rixey and Ray Kolp, the star southpaw being shelled off the hill in the fifth. As usual the Waner boys played a big part in the victory, Paul, in particular, being brilliant. As a further gesture toward winning the batting crown, the pacesetter hit safely three times in four attempts, he adding a triple and a double to his extra-base string.

Grimes was solved quite frequently, but the spitball star was effective with runners on the sacks, no less than 13 of the Reds being left on the basepaths. The home boys scored in the second round and by making another in the fourth they had a two-run lead at this stage. By solving Eppa Jeppa in the fifth for their other two tallies, the Freebooters were able to dispose of the big fellow, Kolp finishing in nice style.

Bobby In Lead at Fifth

BULLETIN.

NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 15.—Bobby Jones, American champion, was leading Phil Perkins, British amateur titleholder, by 3 up at the end of the first nine holes of their 36-hole final round match for the title here today. Jones finished the first nine by winning the sixth and ninth. The seventh and eighth were halved.

NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 15. (AP.)—Under leaden skies holding a threat of rain, Bobby Jones and Phil Perkins started out this morning to decide the amateur golf championship of the United States over a stretch of 36 holes.

It was a battle of champions, the Atlanta lawyer, defending his title, was seeking to add his fourth crown while the British titleholder had a chance to take rank with Harold Hilton as the only British player who has won the American title.

It was heavy under foot, but the soggy fairways gave no advtantage to either contestant, for both can hit far enough not to have to worry about lack of carry.

In spite of the cloudy weather, thousands of golf fans lined the first fairway and surrounded the first green long before the champions drove off.

PERKINS STARTS WELL

Perkins as the representative of the upper bracket drove first and was near rough with the green partly concealed by trees. The American champion was in the woods from the tee. Perkins made a great shot to the green while Jones failed to get on. Bobby finally reached the green in three and when he tumbled his ball in addressing it, Bobby picked up and conceded the hole. Perkins 4, Jones 6. Perkins 1 up.

Perkins was away from tee on the second hole, 304 yards, par 4, but got inside Bobby on the green. Bob's approach putt slipped back and Perkins was a few inches short. It was a half at 4. Perkins 1 up.

Coaches Crowe and Edwards are former Notre Dame stars and Athletic Director Dick Guy is a former Pittsburgh sports editor, long identified with the management of professional and amateur teams. They hope to make St. Vincent's a real factor in collegiate football in Western Pennsylvania.

M'GRAW, ROG CLEARED

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Chicago's turf "scandal" today appeared to have simmered merely into a search for the ancient arch enemy of honest horse racing—the tout or fake tipster who victimizes credulous clients.

The Illinois Turf Association, leader in the investigation, had exonerated Jockey C. E. Allen, under whose name the tipster masqueraded, and Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, was satisfied with the denials of Manager John J. McGraw, of the New York Giants, and Rogers Hornsby, pilot of the Boston Braves, that they had no connection with the affair.

So convinced was the turf body that a tout, who neglected to pay long distance telephone bills, was really active and responsible for the furore that it announced it was prepared to offer a reward for his apprehension.

Harpster's Skill At Kicking Wins Him Hat

Dr. W. L. Marks, one of the Carnegie Tech coaches, is out a new chapeau as a result of Capt. Howard Harpster's kicking prowess.

Harpster kicked the oval yesterday over the Margaret Morrison school building, a height of 105 feet. The pigskin cleared the building by 10 feet. The building is 95 feet high.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Drawings for the first-round games were made for teams competing in the annual championship series of the National Baseball Federation, which gets under way here today. Any team suffering two defeats is automatically eliminated.

The first-round drawings paired: Pittsburgh vs. Cape Girardeau, Mo.; Northwestern Ohio League champions vs. Indianapolis; Omaha vs. New Haven, Conn.; Ohio-Michigan League champions vs. Flint, Mich.; Cincinnati vs. Akron; Waukegan, Ill., vs. Charleston, S. C.; Detroit vs. Cleveland; Dayton, O., vs. Scranton; Waterbury, Conn., vs. Birmingham.

THE FUTURITY CARDED TODAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 15. — (AP.)—With one of the largest crowds in the history of Metropolitan racing expected, America's richest turf event, the Futurity, will be run at Belmont Park today. Twenty-five of the leading 2-year-olds of the country have been nominated, giving the race a gross value of $126,550, of which the winner will receive over $100,000. The race will be run over the 6½ furlongs route of the Widener course. On the same program are two other big events of the year, the $25,000 added Grand National Steeplechase and The Gold Cup.

The entry of many of the leading western horses, including Double Heart, winner of the American Futurity at Arlington last week, which gained him the 2-year-old championship of the West, has given the race a national flavor.

Heading the eastern entries is the favorite, E. R. Bradley's Blue Larkspur, quoted at 5 to 2, with Jack High a close second as public choice.

Every Pittsburgh Housewife should attend The Sun-Telegraph Cooking School in Memorial Hall, Sept. 19, 20, 21. Interesting lectures and demonstrations in cooking and home economics.

St. Vincent's Plans For Grid Future

[This is the sixth of a series of articles by Jess Carver dealing with the football prospects of tri-state colleges. Pitt will be reviewed Sunday, with photos of the Panthers in training accompanying the article.]

By JESS M. CARVER.
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

BEATTY, Pa., Sept. 15.—St. Vincent's College is standing on the threshold of a new life in tri-state collegiate football. This institution, surveying an eye-taking reach of campus, is ready to set forth on a quest for real gridiron glory, under the capable direction of Richard Guy, the new director of athletics, and the coaching of Clem Crowe and Gene Edwards, who won their spurs and fame at Notre Dame.

BUILD FOR FUTURE

It must not be taken from this that the Saints expect to ride through the stern opposition undefeated that confronts the eleven this year. They do not, in fact, expect to become a real power for at least two years, but they are building on a firm foundation. The football squad from which this fall's eleven will be selected numbers 34, of which seven are ends; a like number guards; six are tackles; two are centers; three quarterbacks; seven halfbacks and two fullbacks.

The men are being taught the Notre Dame system, and in the scrimmage I witnessed here, they showed aptness in handling the ball and themselves under the rigorous demands of the style of play developed and made famous by Rockne.

It has been some time since St. Vincent's figured as a "big shot" in tri-state football. The situation as it was explained to me here at the school, which by the way, has a campus second to none in the district and is under the care of the aggressive, understanding and highly competent priests of the Order of St. Benedict, is this:

It has been the idea at St. Vincent's in past years to stress intramural athletics rather than varsity. There has been some opposition to

NEW YORK, Spt. 15.—(AP.)—The executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association last night voted to table Big Bill Tilden's request for reinstatement as an amateur player. This decision in effect, shelved the matter possibly until the next meeting of the committee, set for December.

Panthers Break Camp

CAMP HAMILTON, Windber, Pa., Sept. 15.—A final hard scrimmage early this morning, and Pitt's fifteenth annual football training camp was over.

The Panthers left here in buses for Johnstown and entrained from there at noon. They were scheduled to arrive in Pittsburgh at 3 o'clock.

Toby Uansa and Josh Williams did some fancy stepping in the scrimmages yesterday afternoon and this morning. The young Panther backs are fast and shifty, and with the good interference which Coach Jock Sutherland is aiming at, these boys should be the big kick in Pitt's offensive.

DUQUESNE

If Elmer Layden's Dukes are not good tacklers this year it will be one of those miracles that happen. Two sessions on the tackling dummy every day for two weeks ought to make a tackler out of anybody. The men are fast rounding into shape and are hitting harder every day.

The reason for especial attention being given to tackling is due to the poor form shown last season in this department. In order to insure good work this year, there is also practice in passing and catching, as well as callisthenics.

FIGHT RESULTS

At Erie—Maxie Strub knocked out Newport Johnny Brown, 2 rounds; George Nichols knocked out Cliff Becker, 2 rounds; Johnny Plai knocked out Red Jaderberg, 4 rounds; Tommy Malco knocked out (technical) Frankie Boyd, 1 rounds.

At New Castle, Pa. — Emmett Rocco defeated Al Friedman, 10 rounds; Eddie Weygandt and Jimmy Zill drew, 6 rounds.

CITY LEAGUE TITLE SERIES OPENS TODAY

Book Shoe and Hermes-Grove, respective winners of the first and second half fights of the City League, will meet in the first game of the post-season playoffs for the championship this afternoon at Born field, Beechwood Boulevard.

Despite the fact that plenty of adverse comment is going the rounds regarding the venue of the game, a large crowd is expected. Manager Carson, of Hermes, has Leon, Snee and Cabby in readiness, while O'Brien will have Callahan or Toner on the mound for the Olympic Park boys.

TERRIS IN SCANDAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP.)—Sid Terris, known for several years as the "uncrowned king of lightweights," is charged in a suit for $50,000 with alienating the affection of the wife of Irving Maidman, insurance and real estate broker.

TOURNEY CARDED TODAY

The Swissvale Horseshoe Club will hold its annual corn roast and tournament this afternoon at Elm and Chestnut streets, Edgewood Play begins at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Price, Hukill Bow

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

ANJEANNETTE HUNTER of the Stanton Heights Golf Club has at last come into her own. Yesterday she captured the Western Pennsylvania's women's championship by defeating the veteran Mrs. J. Raymond Price of Oakmont, 4 and 3, in the 18-hole final round over the Allegheny Country Club links. Thus really the beginning a career that may reach heavenly heights.

Runner-up last year, Miss Hunter, is stepping out for big tent golf, and one may look for bigger and better things from her golf sticks before many moons have passed.

Another champion was crowned king yesterday when James T. Lappan, of Pittsburgh Field Club, took J. Lang Hukill, Jr., Shannopin Country Club title holder, for a "ride" on the Aspinwall links in the final round of the first flight in the annual invitation tournament there. The result of the fracas was 4 and 3, with Lappan being up most of the way.

In the other flights Bill Preston lost to H. R. Huemme in the second; Harry Stoebner of Stanton Heights had to go 21 holes with Ben Pettes before he could win in the third, while W. D. Stockley and W. J. Birmingham copped in the fourth and fifth divisions respectively.

Miss Hunter maintained the lead until the seventh hole, where she struck a bad run of luck and dropped the last three holes. She regained the lead with a birdie 4 on the 392-yard eleventh and repeated with another on the 447-yard thirteenth to end the match. The cards:

Fourth sixteen—S. A. Carson, Jr., defeated J. H. Euwer, 3 and 2.

Fifth sixteen—C. C. Cain defeated A. C. Barclay, 3 and 2.

The final round results in the women's championship follows:

ST. VINCENT'S

football on a big scale, for good and sufficient reasons. This attitude has been changed, however, and now, the school is preparing to step forth and take the place that it should rightfully hold.

The St. Vincent squad, while possessing apparent potential strength, is an inexperienced one, and can hardly be expected to play winning football this fall. The men will weigh, on the average, about as much as other schools in the same class in the district. The linemen are heavy, the backs light, fast and smart.

Dunlap Boyle, Bitale and Auckerman, are showing to good advantage at the wings. Especially on the offensive are they bringing gobs of hope to Crowe and Edwards. Yarina, brother of the big fellow at Tech, Scyspanki and Boyell are the other ends battling for varsity berths.

At the tackles, Eisman, a big chap who strips better than 220 and Zappone. Ortner and Campbell have been tearing into things with a vim in the practice sessions held so far. Eisman shows to the best advantage on the defensive. He charges fast, hard and keeps his head up, meaning that he follows the ball well, besides smearing the interference. Boknovic and Shulick are good linemen, and can be used at either a tackle or guard.

Fox, Shields, McKinney, son of an Ohio minister, Potash, Pipic, and Yankovitch are getting regular work at the guards. Yankovitch looms as a powerful offensive player, and is rated A-1 on the defense. Ondeliscka has come along in good fashion, and is a promising lineman. These chaps will average better than 176 pounds.

O'DONNELL IS CAPTAIN

John O'Donnell, of Uniontown, is the center and captain. He is possibly as good a pivot man as will be found on any of the Class B school elevens hereabouts. O'Donnell goes about 180 and is six feet in height, no mean size for a center. Dzuban is his understudy, and a capable one.

In the backfield, at quarterback, St. Vincent's is looking to Rizzo. Smith and Kirchner to handle the position. Rizzo is getting the first call at the varsity post at present, though there seems to be little to choose between the three of them. He is a heady chap and runs his team well.

At the halfbacks, Manion, the two Daly boys, Ray and Merl, Jessico, Abate and Evancho have been responding to the coaching of Crowe and Edwards and are getting help to what backfield play is all about. Milliron, who came up as a center, but because of his drive and speed and ability to punt, is being used as a back, seems to be certain of one halfback berth.

Either Benda or Lucker will play fullback, possibly the former. He is a rip tearing type of back, who hammers the line well and is shifty and elusive enough to slip off the tackles or skirt the ends.

All of the backs are good defensively. Benda and Capt. O'Donnell backing up the line very well.

FACE TOUGH CARD

The St. Vincent's schedule is one that will demand the very best from all concerned if a successful season is to be carved therefrom.

The Saints open with the powerful Tech Freshmen on September 29, playing at home. Then Indiana State Teachers' College will play host to the Saints. Both are tough assignments.

Following the Indiana trip, the boys will return here for a fracas with the ever dangerous and usually powerful Potomac State Normal eleven of Keyser, W. V. October 20 is open and on October 27 the team will meet West Liberty Normal away from home. This contest will be followed by the game with St. Francis, the annual classic of the schedule. The game will be played at Latrobe.

The Geneva Freshmen squad will invade Latrobe the following week and on November 17, West Virginia's Freshmen eleven will come here for a game.

Slippery Rock's eleven will visit here November 24 to assist in closing the season.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

ish soccer star, was engaged by the Cardiff City team for the coming season, but when he tried to land in England he was prohibited from coming shore. England's alien regulations bar foreign workers, apart from specialized occupations, such as waiters and hair-dressers. Foreign artists are admissible, but the Ministry ruled in Jensen's case that a football player is not an artist.

SOME Eastern baseball men are engaged in a lively discussion as to the relative merits of Willie Keeler, one-time star hitter and right fielder for the Baltimore and Brooklyn Nationals and the New York Americans, and Paul Waner, hard-hitting starboard gardener of the Pirates.

When Dutch Carter, one of the East's authorities on baseball past and present, was asked his opinion of Waner, he replied: "As good as Keeler? No, sir. He isn't as fast to first base as Willie was, isn't as good a thrower, and not as good on all kinds of fly balls."

Paul Waner.

BILL HANNA, the veteran New York critic, says it is too early to make a comparison, Waner being in only his third major league season whereas Keeler starred through 13 campaigns, from 1894 to 1906, inclusive.

"I'm not so sure Keeler could go out for fly balls any better than Waner," Hanna comments, "but for cool, wary, unerring instinct in the field, keen, level judgment at bat, on the paths or in the field, I do not regard him as a Keeler. We had but one Keeler. For all around acumen this small man had no equal, and though he has had in certain details, it is hard to say anybody was his equal, taking him for all the things he could do well. He had more uniformly calm judgment and poise than any of them.

KEELER always batted left handed, never shifted over, and he could out-bunt Waner. He could "place" his hits better than Waner or anybody else. I don't believe he could drive the ball as far as the Pirate, but he never had the lively ball to hit. He could break from the plate more quickly than anybody, and there were times when bunting when the bat literally was in the air and Willie under way when his bat met the ball. There is no comparison in the stolen bases of the two. Keeler led far and away, but in justice to Waner, be it said that the method of scoring in the old days gave the players of their day more steals, and stealing has, in a measure, fallen into disuse since the lively ball came in. So I shouldn't hold that difference against Waner, though I do maintain he hasn't Keeler's baseball head, his wise and intuitive judgment."

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

A PROGRAM planned to please the musica ltastes of a nation will mark the initial coast-to-coast broadcast of the Lucky Strike Hour over a countrywide chain, including WCAE, tonight at 1 0o'clock.

The new Lucky Strike Hour will be broadcast from 38 stations and is the first regular weekly feature program sent out from New York to be available to radio fans on the Pacific Coast. It is estimated that a weekly audience of at least 30,000,000 persons will dance to or listen in on this hour, and that its numbers also will be picked up in Europe.

The broadcast will consist solely of dance music and each number will be played in its entirety and not in the usual tabloid form, thus making it a practical dance feature. The selections will be rendered by a specially selected orchestra of 35 solo artist musicians.

These regular Saturday evening hours will open with the Lucky Strike theme tune, "This Is My Lucky Day," and will conclude with the strains of the same selection. The slogan of these Lucky Strike entertainments will be "The Tunes That Made Broadway Broadway," but old favorites will not be forgotten in the weekly presentation of current hits.

The complete program of the first Lucky Strike broadcast follows: "This Is My Lucky Day," "The International Patrol," "Pickin' Cotton," George White's Scandals; "Bambalina," "The Merry Widow Waltz," "Crazy Rhythm," "Oh Evelyn, Stop Your Devilin'," Pom Pom; "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," "The Nightmare," "The 12 O'Clock Waltz," "Old Man Sunshine, "Tiger Rag," "This Is My Lucky Day."

Lew White, organist, will play a program of classical and another of popular music tonight at 8 o'clock for KDKA listeners.

The first program opens with "March" and "Procession" from Delibes' ballet-pantomime, "Sylvia." Popy's delicate "Valse Poudre" and love themes by Zamecnik and Erno Rapee also will be heard.

The second program will be composed of a medley of song hits of yesterday, including such numbers as "Smiles," "Avalon," "Japanese Sandman," "Whispering" and "Poor Butterfly."

EARLY RELEASE OF MEXICAN CAPTIVE HOPED

The Prince of Wales — His Story.

Popularity Due to Interest In Individuals Rather Than Masses

EDWARD P.
By WALTER and LEONARD TOWNSEND

THE Prince is not only a daring rider, but a very accomplished horseman. Much criticism has been leveled at his horsemanship, but the fact remains H. R. H. can hold his own with anyone on the hunting field. The reason why he has had so many spills, apparently, can be explained by two facts. Anyone who enjoys hard riding quickly becomes accustomed to falls. They are part and parcel of the sport and nothing is made of them. Ask any average rider and he will tell you that during a season the most accomplished horseman will be unseated several times. Then again, the Prince is a trier. He will not circumvent obstacles and dislikes dismounting intensely. That is why he prefers to take a chance rather than play for safety.

PRINCE OF WALES

The Prince's indulgence in dangerous sports was actually raised in the House of Commons, and it was urged that the King should speak to the Prince on the matter. The Prince himself was somewhat dismayed at the public intervention and was not at all quite sure that he had deserved it. He ceased riding for a while until public opinion was once more reassured.

It is one of the Prince's ambitions to ride in the Grand National at Aintree, but one which I fear he will not be allowed to achieve.

The Prince is greatly interested in dogs, and at one time shared with Queen Alexandra a preference for Borzois and exhibited successfully.

Likes Yachting

Fishing and shooting (he is an excellent shot) are also sports which the Prince has acquainted himself with, but they cannot be said to hold any great attraction for him. He prefers yachting as a "quiet" sport and he may yet follow his father's love for this luxurious but thrilling pastime. Except during his youth, the Prince has never figured largely in cricket. While he possesses a splendid constitution and his muscles are in fine order, he has scarcely the physique to make really good in the game, his slight stature being a decided disadvantage to him as a batsman, while he has scarcely the weight necessary to make him a good bowler.

Of indoor games, billiards receives the Prince's serious attention, and at Marlborough House he is a keen opponent of the Duke of York—a neat player.

Card games exercise not the least fascination for his royal highness. Unlike his grandfather, King Edward, who found great pleasure in baccarat, and his father, who enjoys a bridge party, the Prince finds cards are slow, but probably it is because he dislikes the vitiated atmosphere and close confinement which generally accompanies these games.

The Prince's ventures into games unknown in this country are many, but he likes clay-pigeon shooting as well as any of the continental games.

The Prince would like to see every Englishman taking up a definite sport and actively participating in it.

Except in the case of King Alfonso of Spain, very few other members of the various royal houses take an active interest in sport, though most of them are good horse-riders.

Without his sports, the Prince would never be able to carry out his strenuous life. And a study of his daily routine shows clearly that he divides the hours of his day into two halves—work and sport.

Chapter XXIII.

IN the autumn of 1927, it was decided that Marlborough House should be the residence of the Prince of Wales, although he was still to retain York House as his headquarters. At first it was rumored that the change of residence was perhaps on account of the Prince's decision to take a wife, but these were unfounded. Marlborough House was built during the first few years of the eighteenth century by the famous Wren, at the order of the Duke of Marlborough, who, to please some sense of vanity perhaps, desired to have a residence equally palatial to that of the King.

The actual site occupies more than five acres of land and there are more than 200 rooms. It is not possible to view it from the Pall Mall, while the glimpse which can be obtained from St. James street does not impress anyone. Only from the interior can it be judged a royal residence.

The Prince of Wales receives comparatively few visitors and, like York House, his new residence is more or less noted for its bachelor atmosphere. As at York House, the Prince's "den" leads off from his actual bedroom, a tall room, suitably furnished with suitable indications that it is meant for hard and oft-times short sleep. A dressing room also adjoins. The whole of the first floor is used as the Prince's personal suite, the rooms on the second floor being devoted to the reception of visitors, while the third story is at the disposal of the household staff.

From one of his drawing rooms the Prince can look out on to the green lawns beyond and the grounds of St. James Palace. All conveniences were installed and even a petrol pump was erected so that the Prince's cars should be put into service at a moment's notice. Garages and stables are replete whilst a canteen exists for the use of servants to which adjoins a rest room for the staff.

Expenses Are Big

The Prince is a member of several clubs, including the Bath Club, the Marlborough, founded by his grandfather; the Guards, the Naval and Military, the United Service Club, the Caledonian, Union and Boodles. The Bath, Marlborough and Guards are the only clubs which His Royal Highness actually and habitually uses, however.

The Prince leaves the majority of his work in the hands of his capable staff, although he keeps an eye upon his own affairs. Practically the whole of the Prince's personal income is derived from the revenues of his Duchy in Cornwall, amounting to something like £40,000 a year. Out of this sum, however, the Prince expends a large proportion on the development of his estates in Cornwall so that he provides work and capital for this agricultural county. At one time the eldest son of the ruling sovereign received an annuity of £20,000 a year as well as the revenues from the duchy, and on the date of his marriage a further annuity of £10,000 per year became due in respect to the Princess of Wales.

The Prince has never enjoyed this annuity!

There are many young men far wealthier than the Prince of Wales, but he does not wish for more money. By sound economies he can manage (without the incessant worries which characterized his grandfather's youth) to make both ends meet without neglect of his princely duties.

Despite his "princely" income, however, His Royal Highness has many calls upon his purse. His expenses are increasing every year and the upkeep of his residence,

1 Dead, 3 Ill After Spree

A three-day drinking orgy ended last night, police reported, when they rushed three men to St. John's Hospital, one dead and the others suffering from moonshine. The men were found unconscious in Metcalf street, North Side.

The dead man is said to be Neal McFadden, 38, of Melrose avenue. His companions, treated at the hospital and then lodged in Woods Run Police Station, said they were Mike Miller, 42, of 2114 Charles street, and Patrick Murphy, 38, of 2536 Charles street. Miller told Patrolmen Harry Bush and William Love that they had been drinking for three days.

An autopsy revealed that McFadden died of acute alcoholism.

COOKING SCHOOL "PUPILS" TO RECEIVE COSTLY PRIZES

All phases of cooking and allied subjects will be discussed next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday by Mrs. Edna Riggs Crabtree at the Second Annual Sun-Telegraph Free Cooking School in Soldiers' Memorial Hall.

Doors will be thrown open to thousands of Pittsburgh housewives at 1 o'clock. A half-hour musical program will follow. Lectures are to start promptly at 2.

Mrs. Crabtree, recognized throughout the country as an expert on cooking and home economics, will bring to Pittsburgh many new lights of food preparation, diets and menus.

MARKETING ON PROGRAM

She will discuss intelligent marketing, offering suggestions which are bound to keep the food expenditures well within the family budget, but at the same time make the daily fare more attractive.

After listening to the lectures, the task of preparing three meals a day, month after month, will not be a monotonous one. Mrs. Crabtree knows, after her long experience in contact with thousands of women every day, that those who regard their kitchens as laboratories find real pleasure in everlastingly varying and improving menus.

The school is sponsored by the Congress of Women's Club and heartily indorsed by merchants. The latter have shown their co-operation by offering valuable prizes.

A General Electric refrigerator, a Tappan gas range, a Hoosier kitchen cabinet, a complete set of Wear-ever cooking utensils and a Lady Dover iron and percolator are the five major prizes.

DAILY PRIZES

Every day 25 market baskets full of nationally advertised food products will be given to lucky Pittsburgh housewives. Every one who attends the school has the same chance of receiving a daily or grand prize.

Soldiers' Memorial Hall has been selected for the Cooking School because of its large seating capacity. Thousands are expected. Arrangements have been made so that everyone in the hall can see each part of Mrs. Crabtree's demonstrations. All the utensils and ingredients used in these demonstrations will be arranged for inspection.

Admission tickets are free. You can secure them at The Sun-Telegraph office—at Spear & Co.— at any Kroger Grocery Store—at any Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company Store—any P. H. Butler Company Store—or at Donahoe's.

TICKETS ESSENTIAL

You can also get them at your own grocer's and at the doors of the Cooking School. Tickets are free, but you must present one to gain admittance.

The demand for tickets already indicates that every session of the school will be well attended.

The fact that the Cooking School not only brings new ideas and recipes, but demonstrates easier methods of food preparation which will interest every Pittsburgh housewife.

The fourth and last session will be held Friday evening at 8 o'clock. At this time the grand prizes will be given away.

Every woman in Pittsburgh who is interested in improving her skill in the kitchen and home is invited.

Every Pittsburgh Housewife should attend The Sun-Telegraph Cooking School in Memorial Hall, Sept. 19, 20, 21. Interesting lectures and demonstrations in cooking and home economics.

Shriners Aid Ice Fund

The Shriners' Luncheon Club raised $556 for The Sun-Telegraph Milk and Ice Fund at its regular weekly meeting at the Fort Pitt Hotel Friday. Of this amount $300 was contributed by Dr. M. Sayle Taylor, of Los Angeles, who has been lecturing on sex hygiene at the Olympic Theater.

Dr. Taylor was the club's luncheon guest. It was no new experience to him, for he has addressed 1,288 service clubs and 68 Shrine clubs.

He told of his experience in the inferno of the slums of great cities, where he has studied juvenile delinquency. Parental neglect is the foremost cause of boys and girls "going wrong," he declared, and in this connection earnestly entreated the 500 Shriners who heard him to find neglected children and "pal" with them.

From discussion of children, who are starved mentally, he turned to those whose physical needs go unsatisfied. He said his attention had been directed to the Sun-Telegraph Milk and Ice Fund and he would like to contribute to it, but would rather have his gift handled as a contribution from the Shriners' Club than that it should be credited to him personally.

"It's a crying, rotten shame," he exclaimed, "that the fund is not larger! The biggest cause of tuberculosis in children is calcium deficiency, and you can supply that deficiency with milk. A dollar and a half will satisfy a child's milk requirements for a week. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll match, dollar for dollar, everything you fellows will give to the Milk and Ice Fund, up to $500."

As the Shriners passed out of the dining room they dropped $256, mostly in dollar bills, into a basket. Informed of the amount that had been raised, Dr. Taylor said, "Put me down for $300."

Another encouraging gift came today from S. M. Stoehr. It is for $25, letting those in charge know that the public is giving thought to the work and those hundreds of babies who are depending upon the Pittsburgh's public's generosity.

HICKORY FLIER'S BODY SHIPPED

A. B. Sullivan of the Sullivan Aircraft Sales Company of Pittsburgh, left here yesterday for Hagerstown Md., to arrange for the funeral of Jack Schillito, 26, of Hickory, Pa., well known Pittsburgh pilot who was fatally hurt at the Maryland city yesterday when he fell against a whirling propellor. He had done most of his flying from Bettis Field. He leaves a widow and a child at Hickory. The body will be taken to his Washington County home today.

"Strip" Constable Refused Pug Assistant

"Jack" Burke (John Berkowski) will not have official sanction to use his pugilistic prowess in the "Strip." His appointment as a deputy constable was refused yesterday by Judge Elder W. Marshall. The judge, however, did appoint John T. Sullivan and Leonard G. Delp to be assistant constables to Constable James J. McManus.

It was about three weeks ago that McManus, saying there was need for three more deputies in the Second Ward, petitioned the court to appoint Sullivan, Delp and Burkowski. The opposing faction attended the hearing in a body, objected to all three, particularly to Burkowski, saying McManus had no need of assistants. They termed Burkowski a "slugger." Once, they said, he sparred with Gene Tunney.

HOPE SOON TO SAVE BANDITS' CAPTIVE

(Universal Service.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—While awaiting official word from Mexico regarding the progress of negotiations for the release of E. J. Bumsted, American mining engineer held for ransom by bandits, the Department of State has issued a formal statement setting forth the steps taken in the case. Early rescue or release are anticipated, the statement said.

It was pointed out that while the United States government has done everything possible to effect Bumsted's release, it has been deemed wise to ask the Mexican government to withhold military measures.

MORROW ACTS

The statement said:

"Last June Mr. Bumsted went to the state of Nayarit, Mexico, to open and operate the Humboldt mine. On August 25 Bumsted was kidnaped. This was reported to the department on August 29.

"On August 30 Ambassador Morrow, learning from the American consul at Mazatlan of this kidnaping, formally asked the Mexican government to take immediate measures for the release of Bumsted.

On the same day the American consul at Mazatlan reported that he had received assurance from the governor and chief of military operations of Nayarit, that they were co-operating to rescue Bumsted. It was also reported on the same date that Bumsted was held for ransom under a threat that if soldiers attempted to make the rescue, the captors would kill Bumsted.

CAUTION ASKED

"Having in mind the disastrous results in similar cases, the American consul requested that the military authorities act with caution.

"The American consul at Guadalajara also immediately interested himself in the situation, cooperating with Bumsted's fiscal agent in Guadalajara, who happens also to be the British vice consul.

"Notwithstanding requests received from certain Americans that the Mexican authorities be asked to withhold military operations against the captors until negotiations were completed for Bumsted's release, the State Department has continued to insist that the Mexican government shall secure Mr. Bumsted's release.

"From the time of his kidnaping until the present the department, the American embassy in Mexico City, and the American consuls concerned have continued to do everything in their power to secure the release of Bumsted.

DANGER GROWS

"On the seventh the American consul at Guadalajara advised that Bumsted's situation was increasingly serious, that contact with the captors had been established, and that everything possible was being done. The seriousness of Bumsted's situation was officially called to attention of the Mexican government on the same day.

"On the following day, September 8, the American consul at Guadalajara telegraphed that the captors had gotten beyond the reach of Federal troops, whereupon the consul was again instructed to keep in close touch with the case and promptly to telegraph the department any important information received.

RECALL SLAYING

"Meanwhile the employers of Bumsted are understood to be negotiating with the captors for his release. Having in mind the fate of Rosenthal, who was killed by bandits when Mexican soldiers attempted to rescue him, the department has left it necessary to conduct this negotiation so as not to have a repetition of that incident.

"The department's present information gives hope that Mr. Bumsted will be shortly rescued or released."

The department announced that within the next 12 hours it expects to receive some definite announcement as to the status of the captured man. His release was supposed to have been effected Thursday, but on account of poor communication facilities, the department said the announcement might be delayed for a few days.

8 IMPERILED IN TRUCK CRASH

Eight persons narrowly escaped death last night when a three-ton truck backed into the home of Morris Price, at 106 Washington street, knocking a large hole in the brick wall.

Louis Price, a son, sitting in the front room was showered by plaster and bricks. His mother, her daughter, Mrs. Henry Cohen, of 2315 Tilbury avenue, and her brother, Dr. Charles R. Price, and Mrs. Cohen's four children, Mildred, 11; Florence, 6; Betty, 4, and Oliver, 2, were sitting on the front steps.

Howard Smith, 31, of 4522 Minerva street, driver, told police that after parking his truck 100 feet away the brakes became released.

TWO HURT, TWO HELD IN AUTO COLLISION

Robert E. Wood, of 552 Neville street, and N. L. Klagis, of 1713 Realty avenue, Beechview, were cut and bruised early today when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by the machine of Robert Powell, of Uniontown, in Neville street, near Wood's home. The injured men were riding in the machine of Robert C. Braun, of the Cathedral Mansions. Wood and Klagis were treated at the Homeopathic Hospital and Fowell and Braun arrested on reckless driving charges.

OUR only experience with a "fining mill," against which motor clubs properly have been campaigning with excellent results, came the other night in a town in the eastern part of the state on the Lincoln highway.

A white traffic line runs through the main street of the town and, of course, motorists must keep to the right of that line. A policeman stands at an intersection, not to direct traffic so much as to detect whether the motorist goes over the white line.

Not more than 10 feet behind the policeman, on a corner, is the office of a squire who sits in front of his office, apparently awaiting transgressors.

A whistle blew and the driver of our car, Frank Wiemer, of Philadelphia, pulled into the side. The officer told him to appear before the court, who already was moving into his hall of justice, preparing to hear testimony.

* * *

"I WAS going about 10 miles an hour," said Mr. Weimer, "and I was on my side of the road, but I guess squires have to live, too, and" (here he produced a bundle of bills that would choke Man O' War), "how much for a first offender, squire, I'd like to be on my way."

"This ain't no fining mill," said the squire.

"It isn't?" asked the alleged offender. "Well, that being the case, I'll call my witnesses—five of them—and you can take your testimony."

To the officer, the alleged offender said: "You'd better not wait in here—you may be missing quite a few out there."

It appeared to the innocent bystander that if you bluff the fining squires sufficiently, accuse them as they accuse you, you put them on the defensive. At any rate, where in a particular case, this writer likely would have been socked the extreme limit, the daring Mr. Wiemer was discharged.

* * *

MOTORING through the eastern section of the state gives the Western Pennsylvanian a better appreciation of the roads afforded him by the various neighboring counties and state government. While the east is more thickly populated, with Philadelphia enrolled on its side, it seems here that we in the west come out much better in the matter of roads.

* * *

Philadelphia, by the way, is stirred as much as Pittsburgh by a series of official investigations, grand jury probes. Philadelphia is far tougher than Pittsburgh. In Philadelphia some of the boys are trying to explain why they purchased quantities of bullet-proof vests and such little trinkets and ornaments as machine guns and sawed-off shotguns.

THE trouble came to a head after a hunchback night club owner was shot dead by a gangster. The gangster had gone to collect for booze delivered. The hunchback said to the gangster, "I'll pay you when I get all straightened out." This was a jocular double entendre, as we say at the engine house. The gangster got the drift. The hunchback meant he would not pay until he could stand erect—straightened out. After that shooting, a probe was instituted, involving socially prominent Philadelphians who have been asked to tell where they bought their liquor. A few have refused to tell.

THREE PRIESTS, LONG APART, MEET AT MOTHER'S BURIAL

Three Catholic priests, brothers, who had not seen each other for many years, returned home yesterday to attend the funeral of their mother, Mrs. Johanna Quinn Cronin, of 5203 Carnegie avenue.

The priests, the Rev. John Cronin, of New Orleans; the Rev. Michael Cronin, of Alabama, and the Rev. Patrick Cronin, of Texas, said masses for their mother, the widow of James Cronin.

Mrs. Cronin, who died Monday, was buried in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The priests were met here by another brother, James Cronin, of Pittsburgh, and their four sisters. The sisters are Mrs. Maurice Ryan, Mrs. William Duffey, Mrs. Martin Cunningham, and Miss Theresa Cronin.

Will Rogers' Daily

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.

I think some of these crooks are just getting killed to show they can have a bigger and finer funeral than their rival had.

It's hard to tell whether there is more guns or flowers at the funeral.

I would rather have the undertaker's privilege with some good high class gang than to have a seat on the Stock Exchange.

In order to out do each other, some gangs will start raising their own flowers.

Two railroad events took place this week for the first time. John Coolidge went to work on one, and Al Smith starts to ride on one.

John had to go to work in an old New England town. It's the only place where he could find a room in America for $12.

Al, don't try to sleep in that hammock.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

Benny Flushes With Anger When Diana Hails Him on Start of Mountain Trip

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

On his first day in Manor Park, where he is to apply the business methods learned in college, Benjamin Carrington Black has occasion to observe three of the suburban town's most alluring examples of femininity. Unnoticed by men, he sees Diana Rand—nineteen and pretty, enter a jewelry store with her friend, Beatrice Sheldon, whose trailing dress is reminiscent of the Gay Nineties. In the store Diana and Bea encounter Ann Evarts, a trim, petite person. Ann in Diana's roadster sees Noddy and Toddy and Norman Gregory and leaves Diana and Beatrice to join them. Bea is furious as she and Diana drive away. She is madly in love with Gregory. Norman hears about Benny being in Manor Park and looks him up. He locates him and invites him to a party at the Yacht Club. He consents to go. Bea and her brother, Freddie, prepare for the party and before leaving their parents warn them to behave like "Sheldons." Freddie calls for Ann, whose mother had just told her she must marry soon or go to work. Diana and her friends meet Benny at the party. It is a gay affair, with Diana being the life of it. Benny is fascinated by the quiet Ann, who makes believe that she does not like "wild" parties. Diana, after the party, tells her mother all about Benny. She meets him several times and falls in love with him. Mrs. Evarts is anxious that her daughter, Ann, fall in love with Benny. However, he is afraid he is falling in love with Diana.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"A WELL-BEHAVED little thing," agreed the small man. "With proper respect for her elders."

"I shall tell her you said that," Hanna simpered. "A compliment from you, dear Mr. Sheldon! Only yesterday she was saying—" Followed a purely mythical anecdote calculated to send his vanity soaring—as indeed it did.

The result of Hanna's strategy was an invitation to chaperone the young folk when they journeyed to the bungalow resort at North Lake in the Connecticut mountains for the week they spent there every summer.

They started out early one morning, two motors holding Beatrice and Freddie, Noddy and Toddy, Diana, Norman and Ann and her mother, and a third car bringing servants borrowed from both the Sheldon and the Rand households.

At the last minute there appeared Benny Black, whom Mrs. Sheldon had invited unknown to Mrs. Evart, and such was her eagerness to place him beside her daughter as to bring about a general scramble which ended with the young man riding between Noddy and Toddy, his eyes going rather questioningly toward Diana.

She hailed him carelessly. "Hi, Benny! Look who's here, folks—ain't we got fun?"

He colored and said something cutting, but it was lost in the shout which rose as the cars started.

A blithe journey up to the Post road with songs and laughter tossed back and forth, the carefree spirit of holiday upon every one—or nearly every one.

For Hanna was too busy thinking to be quite festive. Benny Black's unexpected presence had caused a rapid shifting of her plans; better luck than she had hoped for, this was. The week ahead spelled opportunity all in capitals and once, as the car in which Ann was riding came abreast, she shot a meaning look at the girl. . . .

Nor was Ann exuberant. Chance had put her beside Norman and he did nothing but talk of Bea. In a surge of irritation she burst out at last, "For goodness' sake why don't you marry her if you feel that way?"

"Yes, why?" he demanded. "Because," he went on with the blind simplicity of the man in love, "she won't—that's why! Nothing wrong with me, is there, Ann? I'm a pretty decent guy—able to take care of her."

He rambled on and the flower face grew tense, tight with resentment. So easy for some of them—girls like Bea, who had everything, anyway! And she—Ann—prettier, more desirable than the dowdy Sheldon, always shoved aside. . . .

Anger seared along her nerves, a passion of hatred. In that moment she could have clawed Beatrice, torn and scratched at her like a maddened kitten. The urge was upon her to hurt, to destroy—and suddenly she remembered something, hardly more than a glance, but it was enough.

Controlling her expression, she turned to Norman with an air of shy confidence, speaking as with regret. "Have you thought dear Beatrice may have a reason for refusing you? That she might feel you are too fine? I wouldn't suggest this, only—"

"But, good Lord, Ann—"

"Oh," she answered, softly: "many girls make mistakes. And sometimes—well, when she's been drinking a little—you can't mind my saying this? Beatrice is such a dear girl."

His face whitened, was haggard all in an instant, and she looked away, a little smile in her eyes.

CHAPTER XII.

NORTH LAKE, together with its surrounding shores and even the mountain at the southern end of the mirror-like sheet of water had been purchased by the Manor Park Association—Jeremiah Sheldon, president; Seymour Rand, secretary—and the place was maintained in style as an occasional resort for the fashionable members of the association and their families.

A roomy bungalow, built all of weathered logs, sprawled almost at the edge of the shore; in this there were bedrooms scattered about a great central lounge filled with bear-skin rugs and bright Navajo blankets and deer-heads.

Here Hanna was to be quartered with the girls while smaller bungalows, each boasting a stone fireplace in a living room which duplicated the lounge in the main bungalow, a bedroom and luxurious bath, were assigned Benny Black, Freddie and Noddy and Toddy who elected to room together.

A bit removed from these buildings were the dining hall, a big dormitory for the servants and the house of a resident caretaker who looked after a string of saddle horses, the canoes and a motor launch.

In the excitement of settling here nobody in Hanna's party noticed certain undercurrents of feeling—her watchfulness reflected by Ann, Bea's almost hysterical relief with the realization that long, dusty miles lay between herself and Jeremiah's probing eyes, Deborah's toothy smile; Norman Gregory's white silence.

Hardly were they grouped in the main bungalow veranda before Diana rushed out, clad in the brief scarlet trunks and jersey, and announced herself ready for a swim. Ann, catching Benny's eye, blushed and shifted her look from the other girl's bronzed legs.

"Mother doesn't like me to go into the water," she told him in a little, shocked voice. "It doesn't seem quite—well, nice. Don't you think?"

He nodded approval. Nevertheless, when Beatrice had followed Diana and the other boys had joined them, Benny grew restless, and, excusing himself, he, too, went swimming. They spent a merry afternoon in the water, and Ann was left alone, squirming, while Hanna fumed.

Nor did the evening promise more to the small blonde, dainty and fragile in clinging, pale chiffon. Glowing with health and frolic after her swim, Diana swept the crowd with laughing high spirits, and when she curled up on the rustic bench in a far corner of the veranda, Benny impulsively rose from the step where he had been singing, while Noddy and Toddy thummed ukuleles and sat down beside her. She slipped her hand into his in a friendly way.

They remained thus while the songs ranged from popular ones of the day to college glees, and then suddenly Ann gave a little squeal.

"Right out there!" she panted. "I saw it—something big and black—oh, a bear, maybe! It was going along, sort of crouching—Mother, where are you? I'm so frightened!"

The others proclaimed loudly that there were no bears at North Lake while Hanna gathered her daughter into her arms. But Anna could not be reassured and in the end Hanna sent the boys out to search.

"Such a timid baby I've got! Do go and look, Freddie. You, too, Mr. Black, if you don't mind? I dare say it's silly, but of course there might have been something."

They carried on a search willingly enough, with Diana at their heels. And when they returned, arm in arm, laughing a great deal, Benny went back to the bench—and found Ann in Diana's place.

If Diana noted this and suspected Hanna's smug little flutter of satisfaction, she gave no sign. But later, when the excitement had died and they had wound up the college glees and begun on Negro spirituals, she repeated Ann's shriek, tore at her hair, laid a horror-stricken hand at her throat.

"Right out there—don't you see it? A bear! Save me, somebody! Where are you, mother? Help! Help! A bear!"

An accurate imitation of Ann's lisp—a clever burlesque. The crowd roared with delight, tumbled down the step and began to beat the shrubbery with exaggerated stamping of feet and waving of arms.

Only Benny did not move. For at the first yelp the girl at his side had thrown herself against him, sobbing.

LOVE---THE MAGICIAN

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

WHEN a man's in love, there is no one—there simply could never be any one else—half as wonderful or beautiful as his Beloved. Helen of Troy, Cleopatra—all the sirens of the world put together, couldn't hold a candle to HIS love!

"Just wait until you meet her! Why, she's wonderful! She's the most beautiful thing in the world! And her disposition? She's simply an angel." Haven't you heard your brother, or one of his pals, rave this way? And then came the meeting! You had a hazy idea of what SHE would be like—something between a saint and an angel, with a halo gracing her loveliness, and of such dazzling beauty that you were scared half to death. BUT nine times out of 10 she was a very sweet, colorless little thing—just an ordinary sort of a girl, with not half the beauty of some of the other girls with whom you know he had been going around.

But Love is the greatest magician in the world. He waves his magic wand, and, presto! Where before there was nothing but plain everydayness, suddenly with the eyes of Love the beloved is vested with all the virtues and beauties of the world put together.

And who can deny that this isn't half of life? If we saw nothing but the drabness and ugliness of things we'd never, never be happy or know the ecstacy of living and loving. So don't laugh when one of your male pals start to rave. Some day some one will rave in the same way about you, and it's all true, too, for the time being at least. Only an artist can see beauty where none exists, and Love is the master artist of all times.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

—By HELEN ROWLAND—

HAND-MADE HUSBANDS

VERILY, my daughter, a perfect husband is not a gift from heaven, but a WORK of ART. For the Lord hath made man—but it is the WIFE that maketh an husband! And there is no factory that turneth out the finished product. It is all hand-work!

* * *

Then, I charge thee, be wise in thy choice. For many shall call, but few shall propose, and the selection is meagre and limited.

* * *

Yet, whatsoever model thou choosest, thou shalt find him like unto a ready-made garment, which must be cut down and remodeled, built up, pressed—and repressed—to fit thine ideal, and adjusted to thy temperament.

HELEN ROWLAND

For even the best of all husbands hath many raw edges on his disposition and many wrinkles in his temper and many knots in his prejudices which must be subtly and gradually removed.

* * *

Behold, at the second-hand counter thou shalt find many "used" husbands which have been remodeled by another hand. And these are easy to acquire.

* * *

Yet peradventure, an hand-me-down may have been spoiled in the first making and become frayed at the edges of the temper and shiny on the seamy side.

* * *

But a bachelor who hath seen forty-five summers is only a REMNANT! And there is seldom enough good material left in him to be worthy the labor of upkeep and repairs. For his line is shop-worn and his sentiments are often motheaten. And though his manners may retain their gloss his morals require much patching and his illusions have lost all their color. He is as a last year's bathing suit, slightly washed-out and full of weaknesses.

* * *

Yet, peradventure, a skilful damsel may revamp him and make him to seem as brand-new. For WHAT can a woman not do when she setteth her mind and her heart upon her task, and that task is her soul's desire?

* * *

Verily, verily, a young husband is but the RAW MATERIAL whereon the wife putteth the passementerie and the "finishing touches."

* * *

For to jack up a man's ideals, brace up his courage, keep his ambition from sagging, polish his manners and vacuum his morals is every wife's JOB—today, yesterday and forever.

* * *

And no woman regardeth her husband as a perfect product until she layeth lilies on his chest!

Horoscopes

Sunday, September 16

SUNDAY'S horoscope is under the rulership of the indomitable Mars, inciting to deeds and thoughts of valor and initiative in many directions. New plans of a bold and adventurous nature may be safely elaborated under this energizing planetary sway. Guard against duplicity in personal relations.

Those whose birthday it is are under the prospect of a year of enterprise and initiative, with leanings toward large and bold undertakings. Employment is under benefic rule, but in purely personal relations be on guard against duplicity. A child born on this day may be resourceful, enterprising and courageous and should succeed independently as well as in employment.

First essay to stuff the mind with solid bravery, then march on, gallant.—HERBERT.

Monday, September 17

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for turmoil and turbulence as well as for incidents of craft and subtlety, with many peculiar angles. While new ventures have some benignant aspects yet the danger to finances enjoins extreme precaution in all undertakings. Shun all speculative ventures.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which peculiar situations of a subtle nature may arise. While new projects may be taken under advisement yet finances are in danger and speculation of every character should be avoided. Beware duplicity from every angle. A child born on this day may have some subtle or irregular characteristics and may likewise incline toward rash and tempestuous behavior, unless given early discipline.

Madge and Lillian Plan to Keep the Secret

"THE anointed idiot!" Lillian exclaimed when I had finished my story of Eleanor Lincoln's confession that she was in reality the Princess Olina of Transvania. "Oh! I don't mean her running away. I admire her spunk, and the way she managed her masquerade was decidedly clever. Incidentally, that's one on both of us, old dear. If we'd have thought of that nose-bobbing stunt, we'd have been sure of her identity when Mrs. Townsend flashed that photograph on us."

"How little Mrs. Townsend would preen herself if she discovered her guess was correct?" I said, smiling.

"She mustn't know!" Lillian said vehemently. "We've got some job on our hands to get those two scions of royalty back to their ancestral halls without people finding out who they are, but it's got to be done. How we're going to insure that girl's safety, however, when the little fool refuses to tell what's frightening her is something else again. Of course, those field glasses in the tree were held by one of those men in the shack, and equally of course, they're after that paper in the back of the miniature case. 'By the way,' 'in passing,' and all the rest of it, I owe you a trifling apology. I thought your imagination was a bit 'het up' when you spoke of danger to the farmhouse, but I agree with you, that if the man in the tree saw you put that miniature into Olina's dress, he'll figure that you probably know about the paper, and he's mighty apt to turn his eyes in your direction. But don't expend any of your worry upon Junior. We'll look after him. Just don't pull any foolhardy stunts yourself. Watch your own step until we're out of this mess.

"Of course, the first thing is the deciphering of your copy of that paper we found in the miniature case," Lillian went on. "I've a hunch that the answer to the whole thing lies in that. She hasn't any idea you've seen that, has she?"

"I'm sure not," I replied, "but I can't get to work on that or anything else until I've made sure that the girl has better safeguards thrown around her than Jerry Ticer and that wolfhound."

"I am afraid Jerry can be discounted, but Fedor is worth a regiment," she answered. "However, I agree with you, but on one thing I shall be adamant. You're not going to spare anybody from the farmhouse. Both Dicky and Jim ought to be here—and I think Dicky should be told of this. We can't very well ask him to be on his guard without telling him what it's all about."

I looked at her quizzically.

"How much do you think you'll have to tell Dicky?" I asked.

"I don't know," she said reflectively. "He has some knowledge, that's a cinch, but how much is another question. But don't you agree with me—"

"I shall tell him nothing," I said with the memory of Dicky's provoking behavior concerning the red bearded man, still strong upon me. "But you have my permission to give him any information you think best. But we can't wait for his return. I feel very strongly that somebody must watch over that house tonight."

"Agreed, and I doubt if you'll have the slightest difficulty about it. Who is as logical a candidate for the job as the gentleman who so strenuously desires to make the fugitive princess his daughter-in-law?"

"Philip Veritzen!" I uttered the name mechanically, for I was a bit startled at the patness of her solution which had not occurred to me.

"The same."

"But, do you think he knows? I ought not tell him the girl's secret if he doesn't."

"You won't have to. He probably doesn't know of the danger she's in, but I'll bet my new glass eardrops that you can't give him any other news concerning the Princess Olina of Transavania, or any of her relatives. The silly old tuft hunter! But we need him in our business just now. I'll telephone him to come over right away to see me on a very important business matter. That lets you out, so if there's any cheeping about the call from the Dicky-bird, I can take all the blame."

How to Keep Well

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Athletic Heart May Follow Undue Strain

(Fifth Heart Article.)

IN the first of these articles about the heart I told you that I had been asked to do them by a college president. He was worried considerably about his heart and I have tried to show that heart ailments are rarely a sufficient cause of worry. Most cases of "heart disease" are purely imaginary.

DR. COPELAND

But, after all, of all men—college presidents should be informed regarding the functions, capabilities and limitations of the human heart. Multitudes of young men and women are under their care. These young people should be guarded against athletic excesses, worry, overwork, and all other varieties of excesses which make for heart disease.

I believe in football, handball, tennis, rowing, running, jumping and all sorts of track work. But violent sports, in which tremendous heart action is demanded, should not be indulged in without knowing the state of the heart of the student who engages in them.

Keene Fitzpatrick is a very old friend of mine and say truly that I believe Keene has done more to develop straight thinking than any college president of modern times. This statement is made with humble apologies to the teaching profession, but with conviction of soul that it is true.

Straight thinking depends on a clean mind and a clear brain. Nobody can have these without a clean body. To have a perfect body there must be systematic training of the whole man. It is that training Keene has done through these many years.

The farmer boy leaves home to go to the city. After a couple of years of the softness and self-indulgence of urban life, he goes home at harvest time. The temptation of the occasion and "dares" of his old associates send him into the harvest field to pitch hay or bundles of grain.

His heart has grown flabby. Without systematic daily exercise, he is in no condition to put this terrible strain on the softened organ. Two hours of this exercise will do such damage to his heart as to make him an invalid for months, if not for life.

The heart will not tolerate such treatment. Never rush into violent sports or activities. Break in gradually. Then you will be safe and your heart will gradually assume strength and powers of resistance.

In the old days of misdirected physical activities in college it was not uncommon for the graduate to find himself a poor insurance risk. It is discouraging, indeed, to be famous as a college athlete and then have to suffer the rest of one's days with an athletic heart.

The way to deal with these cases is never to have them. Supervision of college athletics is just as important as supervision of college studies.

I am sure my college president friend will agree with me.

(End of Heart Series.)

Answers to Health Queries

W. P. Q.—What causes the eyes to itch all the time, especially at night?

A.—You may be troubled with eye strain. Consult an eye specialist for an examination before the condition becomes more serious. Perhaps if you wore a rest glass for a short time the trouble would disappear.

FOR THE LOVELORN

Thank You

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am writing to you for a little advice. I have girl friends and boy friends and plenty of them, but now my boy friends are just friends with the exception of one, and I like him pretty well. I have never had a date. I think myself I was too young. I had never asked mother about this, for it was useless. I didn't have any desire to have dates for I knew I was too young. I agree on your petting, smoking and drinking proposition. I hate a girl that smokes. I think a girl that pets is silly, and as for a girl that drinks, she belongs in the reform school. I think if I did have a date I would resist these things, and if I didn't I would have to know the reason why. Now, some girls are going to say: "That girl is green and absurd." But I would like to tell you I might be green and a freshman, but I am not absurd. There are too many other people in this world thinking the same thing about this problem for me to be absurd. I will give you some of this boy's history. He is a blond and is a sophomore in high school; he is also on the track team, and I might add the most important thing of all, he is a gentleman. Now my question: Do you think that at 16 I am too young to have dates with him? Please give me your opinion of what age you think a girl should have dates.

THANK YOU.

If your mother permits, this boy might come to see you at your own home once in a while.

Joy

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your wonderful advice to young ladies and men. I am in love with a young man, but, Miss Gale, he drinks, smokes and goes to wild parties. I am not what you call perfect, but no one can say I am not the right type. Miss Gale, he tells me he loves me, and yet he does not come up to see me for two or three weeks at a time. Do you think his love is worth while having? There is another young man wants to go with me, but I will not go with him because I love the first young man. I hope you have success in your work. I will sign my nick-name.

JOY.

I certainly do not think this first man is worth worrying over. The other seems much the better chance for happiness.

Appreciate

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a constant reader of your column and do think you give wonderful advice for which I am grateful, too, I am a girl of 28. A few weeks ago at my girl friend's house I was introduced to a man of about 31. No other fellow has ever made such an impression on me as this young man. I fell and fell hard for him. I would like to get acquainted with him, but still would not like him to think that I'm running after him. Would it be proper if I told my girl friend that I love him? Should I quit going to her house just because I would not want him to know that I'm crazy over him? How can I get to be more friendly with him? I do not pet, drink or smoke and am respected by both young and old folks, but it seems that young men do not care for me, although they respect me. How can I become more popular with them? I thank you very much, Miss Gale, for your advice, which I will greatly

APPRECIATE.

It is your privilege to ask this man to call on you, so why not avail yourself of it, since you like him so much? But don't tell anyone how you feel about him. Perhaps you are a bit stiff and stand-offish with people. Be more friendly and you are bound to have more friends.

Undecided

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your advice for quite a while. I am a girl in my teens and in love with two different boys, one of which is of a different nationality and I like him more than the other who is my own kind. They both live in the same town and when one comes to see me they both come. Now, Miss Gale, what shall I do? My people don't approve of my going with the one boy and I like him best. I drink and smoke and don't see any harm in it. Now express your opinion on these questions. Thanking you for your space and time, I am

UNDECIDED.

You are not really in love with either of these boys, my dear, or you would be sure of your own mind. Keep your friendship with both until you are old enough to decide between them. You are too young to be thinking of being in love. I am sorry you think it is all right to drink and smoke.

LOCAL STOCKS ABSORB PROFIT TAKING SALES

MACHINE COMMON HIGHER IN PITTSBURGH MARKET

American Window Glass Machine common resumed its advance in the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, getting up into new high ground on the move at 35. The advance came after earlier realizing sales had forced the stock to dip under 33. The preferred stock was a fraction below its best price of yesterday, opening at 49.

Other glass stocks traded in smaller volume. Pittsburgh Plate Glass sold 2 points lower at the opening at 286. United Engineering and Foundry common sold a fraction higher. Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt was slightly lower in the early dealings. Lone Star Gas opened unchanged at 54½. A total of $8,000 Independent Brewing 6s sold at 70.

The American Window Glass Machine Company stocks had a sharp rise near the close. Prices were bid higher with unusual rapidity. Machine common sold at 40 and the preferred at 55.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

Chain Store Age Sees Odd Shelf Fellows in Retail Stores; Lunch at Cigar Stores Latest in Side Lines.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THIS has been called an age of specialization. But the trend in retail selling appears to be in the opposite direction. In the days when life was simpler we bought tobacco in a cigar store, pork chops at the butcher's, coffee at the grocer's and the druggist had a formal array of bottles on his shelves and actually made a living filling prescriptions. Except for the department stores, which consisted of a score of individual shops under one management and one roof, each storekeeper was a specialist and the shoe maker stuck to his last.

TODAY we buy a ham sandwich and a chocolate malted milk in the cigar store, pork chops and cigarets at a chain grocery store and a pound of coffee from the druggist who has completely hidden his prescription department in a back room.

THE chain stores are principally responsible for the present mania for housing apparently irrelated lines of merchandise in the same shop. They started as specialists but the struggle to make every inch of floor space earn money and to keep the salesman busy each minute has produced startling combinations.

THE drug stores were the first to attempt to market every conceivable human need in one small shop. The decline in the tendency of doctors to recommend medicines probably had much to do with this. A waning prescription business forced them to develop other sales until the present replica of the country general store was achieved.

THE tobacco chains for years have been experimenting with outside lines such as safety razors, candy and toys. The extra articles added nothing to the overhead and increased the profits of each sales unit. But the boldest step in this direction has just been taken. Lunch counters are appearing in many of the chain cigar stores. The installations involve some outlay of capital and additional operating expenses but the two activities probably attract sales for each other.

THE grocery chains are opening larger units. They have started to sell meats and to carry a larger line of fruits and vegetables. The convenience of making several types of purchases under one roof is undoubtedly a sales attraction.

Chain store operators have developed to a high point the bargain offering to bring customers in the store who will make profitable purchases of other articles. The chain grocers have been selling the popular brands of cigarets at lower prices than the chain cigar stores. There is practically no margin of profit in these cigaret sales but they attract customers for more satisfactory lines.

HOW far the development of side lines can be carried without reducing turn-over to too low a point is hard to determine. But the chain operators appear to have been thoroughly convinced that greater profits will be found in adding more lines and in operating much larger store units than in the past.

The movement has been hastened by competition nad small margins of profit. It seems likely that future competition will be even more keen as the various classes of retail merchants encroach on each other's territory.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

Mostly all lines of fruit and vegetables were in active demand today at the local wholesale produce district. The quotations were about unchanged.

Poultry supplies were liberal, with the market about steady, demand fair and quotations unchanged.

The butter and egg markets were firm. Cheese was steady. No change was made in quotations on these markets.

Car lot supplies were liberal, a total of 579 cars being on track. Included in the arrivals were 3 cars of apples, 11 cabbage, 7 cantaloupes, 8 celery, 37 grapes, 3 onions, 2 oranges, 14 peaches, 10 pears, 3 peppers, 8 potatoes, 26 sweet potatoes, 3 plums and 2 cauliflower.

STOCKS-BONDS-GRAIN-PROVISIONS-LIVESTOCK

Forbes

Gambling, Not Investing; Rumors Exceed Advances

By B. C. FORBES

SPECULATORS are having thrilling times in the stock market. One hour the bears have the bulls on the run, but the next hour the bears are routed. The public are tossing their money into the ring quite freely, nearly always on the buying side.

Nobody long familiar with the ways of Wall street imagines for a moment that these daring pool operators are anxious to acquire huge blocks of stock at these prices for permanent ownership. Their object is to whoop-up excitement in their pet issues, force quotations dazzlingly higher and then try to unload on the public at handsome profits. All goes as merry as a marriage bell while the manipulators are buying, but when efforts are made to cash in their paper profits, the game doesn't always prove pleasant.

In my opinion very little has been accomplished thus far in the way of distributing pool stocks among the public. In a few cases it looks as if the pools may be left high and dry in possession of their accumulations. Often it becomes necessary for pools to buy far more than they desire. Wall street reporters are beginning to refer to this, that and the next overboomed issue as having been in large measure "cornered."

RUMORS are becoming as numerous as stock advances. When a stock goes away above reasonable heights, the favorite dodge is to declare that a merger is being arranged. A large-sized stock dividend is another common form of Wall street canard, of course, extra or increased dividend rates are frequently predicted, without foundation. Of course, there have been and still are enough consolidations and also enough "split-ups" and other stock dividends to bring most rumors within the range of plausibility and credulity. Although authoritative denials have come oftener than once this week, the rumor mill grinds out new bullish ammunition without slackening.

Nobody can tell when the end of such feverish activities will come. The end always has come in the past—often very suddenly and disastrously. That the end will come this time, also, is certain. But whether it will come before the election or after is anybody's guess.

THE yield on representative bonds is today higher than the yield on representative stocks. Old-timers interpret this as foreshadowing the end of the unprecedented up-swings in stocks. But the "Coolidge bull market" has fooled the old-timers over and over again.

THE stock market now possesses more attractions for gamblers than for investors.

IT is hardly conceivable that money apart from call money can become much dearer. A 7 per cent time money rate in Wall street was wholly abnormal before the creation of our Federal Reserve System. Such a rate is today freakish in view of our 5 per cent Federal Reserve rediscount rate for commercial bills and in view of the drastically lower rates ruling in London and the principal continental financial centers.

It is entirely logical to look for considerable shipments of gold to this country unless our Wall street money rates promptly decline. No inflow of enormous proportions is, however, likely to be sanctioned; Washington as well as London, Paris and other capitals would doubtless create obstacles.

Demands already are voiced for changes in the Federal Reserve law. Admittedly, the reserve authorities have lost thorough-going control—witness the wholly abnormal expansion in outside, or "outlaw," lending of call money in Wall street. But by the time Congress convenes, the whole money and stock market situation may have returned to something approaching normal.

THE Long Island Railroad has considered giving notice to all married women employes whose husbands are able to act as bread-winners that their services will not be required after December 31.

This whole subject of employing married women in preference to married men is receiving thought from many employers anxious to do the right thing. Unemployed men—and there have been many of them—complain bitterly that it is unfair to have two bread-winners in one family when this makes it impossible to have one bread-winner is so many other families.

This far-reaching economic and social question is sure to come more and more to the front.

THEATRICAL stocks have been acting theatrically.

WERE I asked to name the six ablest and most influential business men in America I would include in the list Fred Fisher, head of the Detroit family of Fisher Brothers.

STOCKS GIVEN GOOD BUYING SUPPORT

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(A.P.)—Good buying support came into the stock market overnight, and opening prices displayed a firm undertone. The first sale of New Haven was a block of 12,000 shares at 65, up ½. Warner Bros. common, which had a violent break yesterday, opened 4 points higher, and Stanley Company of America 1¾. Union Carbide ran up nearly 3 points and Canadian Pacific, Westinghouse Electric, Radio, Studebaker and Electric Auto Lite advanced a point or so.

Organized buying support for the amusement shares, the violent break in which unsettled yesterday's market, helped to revive speculative confidence. Buying of the oils was stimulated by the statement of Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, regarding discussions for a world curtailment of crude production.

Warner Brothers common and A stocks rallied 7 and 5 points, respectively, before the end of the first half hour, and Fox Film and Stanley Company of America extended their initial gains to 2 points.

One block of 10,000 shares of Midcontinent Petroleum changed hands at 36, up 1 and a new high record. Richfield Oil of California also advanced a point.

Rails, which have been lagging behind the industrials, moved forward under the leadership of Canadian Pacific, which extended its initial gain to 3 points. New Haven and Erie were in brisk demand but St. Paul preferred was heavy.

There were a few soft spots. Brooklyn Union Gas, which scored a spectacular advance early in the week on merger rumors, fell back 2½ points on realizing. Interboro Rapid Transit, International Combustion and Bucyrus Erie yielded about a point each.

Foreign exchanges opened steady with sterling cables unchanged at $4.85 1-16.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 8 to 10 points on selling stimulated by relatively weak Liverpool cables and favorable weather reports from the south. Prices broke into new low ground for the movement, with December contracts selling off to 17.77c and March to 17.30c, or 12 to 14 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

There was some trade buying at the decline and after the execution of stop orders uncovered at the opening, prices steadied up a few points from the lowest on week-end covering.

Private cables reported increased hedging and general liquidation in Liverpool. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance was estimated at 26,382 bales against 79,383 last year.

DOOMED NEGRO GETS STAY AT LAST MINUTE

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 15. — (AP.) — Henry Grogan, Negro, whose hanging was to have taken place here today, has another month to live. Only at the last moment was decision taken against execution.

Warden L. M. Robinson of the state penitentiary said opinions reaching him from Attorney General Howard B. Lee at Charleston, caused him to abandon plans for the execution until 60 days after the fixed date of execution, August 16.

Grogan had not been informed of an all-day controversy about the date of his execution and last night paced restlessly back and forth in his cell. All day he had quailed before his fate. Today he is to learn of the stay.

BECKLEY, W. Va., Sept. 15.—(AP.)—A telegraphic controversy which ended in a stay for Henry Grogan, condemned Negro, started when Judge J. W. Maxwell telegraphed Warden L. M. Robinson, at the state penitentiary, that in his opinion Grogran "cannot lawfully be hanged until he is resentenced by the Raleigh county criminal court." Judge Maxwell's telegram was in response to an inquiry by the warden as to two stays of execution, one of which the penitentiary warden interpreted as expiring today and the other October 16. Other officials thereupon dissented.

Grogan was convicted of attacking Mrs. Earl Akers, Normal school student. Some time after Grogan's conviction Mrs. Akers was taken to a Beckley hospital suffering from a bullet wound which authorities were told was self-inflicted. She died suddenly the day following her discharge from the hospital. A finding of death from natural causes was returned.

Motoring in Comfort

A Menace to Railroad Dividends.

ON CALIFORNIA'S "PICKWICK" MOTOR SLEEPER.

Old Socrates said he was the "gadfly," stinging men, mak- g them think.

Motor omnibuses and flying machines are two gadflies that ll make railroad men think—those that DO think.

The day is near when all long-distance travel will be far above the ground, above railroad tracks and locomotives, and cost less than half the present price of travel.

And already motor omnibuses, like the one shown in this picture, cause railroads to worry about dividends.

In England, the thing has gone so far that railroad companies have been compelled to reduce their prices almost half because they could not compete with cheaper, equally comfortable motor bus travel.

A BRITISH MOTOR BUS—SLEEPING CAR.

Above you see what the British are doing in competition with their railroads.

The Albatross sleeping car carries people swiftly, without a stop, by the shortest roads.

The competition with railroads has made it necessary to reduce the pay of railroad workers, and their unions have consented, seeing that it was inevitable. Wages had to be reduced or railroads had to stop.

These pictures are printed to make the people, and especially the owners and managers of railroads, think now before conditions get bad.

You can't prevent these comfortable motor buses running.

The railroad suggestion that it is an outrage to allow them to use public roads that taxpayers have built is a strong argument from the railroad point of view.

But you will not persuade the people that they mustn't use their own roads as they choose.

In California, where the Pickwick stages run, and in other places, each bus pays for the use of the roads a tax that more than makes up for their use. Another tax on gasoline in several states keeps all roads in repair and builds new roads.

Railroad men must listen, although some of them dislike him, to Henry Ford. He calls it ridiculous to have a car weighing 100,000 pounds carrying passengers weighing less than 10,000 pounds. That's what happens in every big Pullman car.

The steel cars are heavy, because they must be, running in long trains.

Early in the war, Henry Ford, riding in a Pullman between Baltimore and Washington, said to the writer: "They will have to change this kind of transportation, or the automobile will change it for them.

"They put cars one behind the other, so that when the engine stops the rear cars dash into the cars ahead. To meet that impact they must have these gigantically heavy passenger cars and carry more than ten pounds of dead weight for every pound of passenger. They will have to split up their trains, adopting the automobile idea."

That was long ago, and railroad men did not listen. They will listen now because they MUST.

A light automobile will carry its own weight in passengers. That means low cost.

The people you see above, lying in motor bus sleeping berths, travel "on air," on huge, comfortable rubber tires.

The luxury of marvelous trains that cross the continent is far from being equaled as yet by motor buses.

The speed and safety of the finest railroad trains, like the Pennsylvania's "Broadway Limited" or the New York Central's "Twentieth Century," cannot be touched in motor competition. But THE AIRPLANE IS COMING.

The fastest train from New York to Chicago takes more than 20 hours. The airplane will do it comfortably between breakfast and dinner, and later, when planes are perfected, between luncheon and dinner, doing it safely, and so cheaply that carrying passengers long distances on rails will be ABSOLUTELY ABANDONED—or in motor buses, either.

Motor buses now travel from San Diego, at the southern end of California, to Seattle, more than 1,000 miles away. Flying machines will put an end to that. Flying from San Diego to Seattle, with stops at Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland, will take six hours at first and three hours later.

These two pictures should warn railroad owners, as the

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

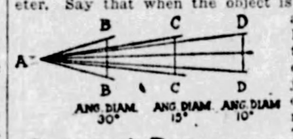
Astronomical Measurements

"Kindly give me an idea just how a planet is measured—the size and the distance from the earth. I have failed in trying to convince my friends that astronomers are able to tell almost exactly the size and distance of the sun.—J. D., Chicago."

YOUR friends are too skeptical. These measurements are made by applying a very simple mathematical principle, the only difficulty being, just as in any other measurement, to have the observations accurate.

I will try to show you the principle, which anybody can easily learn and apply. It rests on the interrelation of size and distance. The nearer any object is the bigger it looks. But what does bigness mean in such case? It means angular diameter, in degrees, minutes or seconds; not linear diameter in miles, feet or inches.

Thus, in the diagram, let "a" be the eye of an observer looking at an object of fixed length, or diameter. Say that when the object is at "b-b" the angle at "a" between the lines from the eye to the opposite ends, or sides, of the object measures thirty degrees. Now remove the object to "c-c," twice as far from the eye as it was before, then the angle will measure fifteen degrees, or be half as great as at first. Next remove the object to "d-d," three times as far as it was at the beginning; now its angular diameter will be only ten degrees.



Size and Distance.

So you see that, while the actual size of the object remains the same whatever the distance, the angular, or apparent, size varies inversely as the distance, increasing with approach, decreasing with recession.

Now, there is a known mathematical ratio between the size of an object measured in degrees of angle and its distance measured in terms of its diameter. At a distance equal to 57.3 times its actual, or linear, diameter its angular diameter will be one degree. If it measures two degrees in angular diameter its distance will be half as great, or about 28.65 times its actual diameter. In round numbers the sun and the moon are each about half a degree in diameter; hence their distances from the earth must be about 114.6 times their actual diameter in miles. Or, taking the distance first, their actual diameters in miles must be about 1/114.6 of the distance. But the denominator of this fraction is too large, because we have used round numbers.

So much for the relations between size and distance. But we must first ascertain one of them in order to get the other. Let us take the distance first. Without regard to the size of an object, its distance is calculable from the angle between two lines drawn from two sufficiently separated points to the center of the object. Thus, if from two points on the earth, thousands of miles apart, we make simultaneous observations on the moon we shall get an angle between the lines of sight to the moon, which, by the rules of trigonometry, will give us the moon's distance, on the same principle which enables the land surveyor to ascertain the distance of a far-off object by observing it from opposite ends of a base line of known length. Then, knowing its angular diameter by measurement, he can calculate the moon's actual diameter from its distance, as shown above.

In the case of the sun the distance is so great that the angle between two lines from different points on the earth becomes too small for easy measurement, and the preferred method is first to measure the distance, by angles, or "parallax" as it is called, of some planet, like Mars, or, better, the asteroid Eros, which at times approaches nearer the earth than any other body except the moon; and then to obtain the sun's distance by proportion—for the relative distances of all the bodies of the solar system are known by theory, so that if one is measured the others can be deducted.

Stop Flirting in the Office!

YOUNG fellow, are you making it hard for the pretty girl who works near you in your department to do her work?

Often the good-looking girl makes greater effort with less success to do the work for which she is paid than the unattractive girl.

Not infrequently it is due to interruption by men.

Men stop to talk to the good-looker, address remarks in passing that make it more difficult for her to concentrate and do her best.

Some companies hesitate about employing unusually pretty girls because they think it works badly both ways—the girls are hampered and the men neglect their jobs.

It is unfortunate that such a handicap should be put on good looks.

The men are usually to blame.

Also it is a feminine trait to want to be popular.

For this reason girls often do not give fellow-workers the rebuffs they deserve.

How do you treat the girls where you are employed?

If you bother them you are not giving them a fair deal.

If they lose their jobs you may be responsible.

Quit kidding and do the work for which you are paid.

The Return

IN vain men visit long-remembered lands
Where ghosts of old delight
Forever beckon them with joyous hands
Down ways serene and bright.

In vain they grope through every well-loved place
For joys that once they knew;
On plain and upland years have left their trace,
Their shade on heaven's blue.

The fragrant paths they roamed have now grown strange,
And, struggle as they will,
They can not penetrate the mist of change
That veils each field, each hill.

Yet could they go with dreams and hopes renewed,
Their gay, young selves again,
They would find waiting all that once they wooed,
Untouched by time's dark stain.

Great Passages from the Bible

The Calamities of the Wicked

(Job 18; 5-21)

YEA, the light of the wicked shall be put out, and the spark of his fire shall not shine.

The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his candle shall be put out with him.

The steps of his strength shall be straightened, and his own counsel shall cast him down.

For he is cast into a net by his own feet, and he walketh upon a snare.

The gin shall take him by the heel, and the robber shall prevail against him.

The snare is laid for him in the ground, and a trap for him in the way.

Terrors shall make him afraid on every side, and shall drive him to his feet.

His strength shall be hungerbitter, and destruction shall be ready at his side.

It shall devour the strength of his skin: even the firstborn of death shall devour his strength.

His confidence shall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and it shall bring him to the king of terrors.

It shall dwell in his tabernacle, because it is none of his: brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation.

His roots shall be dried up beneath, and above shall his branch be cut off.

His remembrance shall perish from the earth, and he shall have no name in the street.

He shall be driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world.

He shall neither have son nor nephew among his people, nor any remaining in his dwellings.

They that come after him shall be astonied at his day, as they that went before were affrighted.

Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

LOVERS get into terrible mixups if they tell the truth to each other. Why, boys and girls, when they're together, just have an awful time, dodging the truth, and sometimes a guy will tell his girl something true before he thinks, and she won't speak to him for three parties afterwards.

Anyway, one fellow was making a great fuss over his girl, and she was kinda testing him out by telling him how nice some other girls were.

"Do you like Doris?" she says.

"No, not very well."

"Why, I'm surprised. She is an awful nice girl, George, and she's got lots of brains, and she's as pretty as a peach."

"Aw, Clare, quit telling me about Doris! I don't care anything about niceness and brains and beauty and all such stuff! I just like you!"

That guy never did catch up to Clare again.

Costly Game

THE baseball game was very exciting, and the two men began to talk about the plays they were seeing.

"Excitin' game, isn't it?" said one.

"Aye!" was the reply. "But I don't like excitin' games very much."

The other stared at him in amazement.

"What!" he exclaimed. "Don't like excitin' games? An' why on earth is that?"

"Well," was the reply, "It's like this. I chews a lot o' tobacco, an' every time the game gets very excitin' I swallows all I 'ave in my mouth. Excitin' games is gettin' too expensive for me!"

The Huntington estate spreads over 207 magnificent acres. The library contains about 150,000 printed books, 4,000 manuscript volumes and more than 800,000 autograph letters and documents, aside from its paintings—mostly of the eighteenth century British school. One must secure admittance cards weeks and sometimes months in advance.

The Power to Become

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Just before leaving for his summer vacation, Dr. Fosdick, of New York, delivered a remarkable address on "The Power to Become."

He emphasized the fact that the redeeming element in Christianity is that it is a developer.

The history of religion has been stained with many crimes. It has been tyrannical, retroactive, bigoted at times. Taking into consideration the actions of the church at the time of Voltaire, he may have been justified in exclaiming, "Crush the infamous thing."

But Christianity has justified itself in spite of its drawbacks by its peculiar power to make something out of apparently hopeless souls. It is probably the greatest developer known to man.

The most important element of any man is his growing power. Not alone his ambition but his ability to develop into what he wants to be.

The remarkable thing about Alexander was not only his over-weening ambition, but the fact that he really became a world conquerer.

John Fisk said that the essential characteristics of man is his improveableness.

The most amazing thing about man is his discontent.

You cannot look on any man and estimate him as a fixed quantity. He may be such and such a thing today, but he may have the power to become something else tomorrow.

Reading the book Carnack, by Oliver Gay, we get a good picture of the crude man just as he became a thinking animal. Looking at him as the first discoverer of the Word, the Fire and such things, and comparing him with what man is today we realize man's immense capacity for becoming.

Projecting this line of development far into the future, what may man not become! Those who look upon heathen and barbarous people as impossible do not realize their power of growth. What may not China become in the future when the boundless opportunities of democracy have given it a chance!

Someone said of a new invention when it was as yet but a toy, "What good is that?" And the answer was, "What good is a baby?"

Who realized in the days of its infancy what the telegraph and telephone might become? Who realized when Edison was a telegraph operator, Lincoln a humble country lawyer, and Hoover working his way through school, what they might become?

Happiness is not a fixed state, which anyone may arive at. It appertains to our becoming. A man is happy as he grows. He usually is not happy when he stops.

Whatever makes us stop either in youth or old age, whether it is adverse circumstances, misfortunes or what not, is tragedy.

There is only one blessedness for humanity as there is only one true life for a seed growth, and the supreme calamity is whatever makes us give up.

Motoring in Comfort

cry of the rhinoceros bird warns the huge beast that danger is near.

Some railroad men, like the rhinoceros, are hard of hearing, with not particularly good eyesight. Others know well what is coming. Mr. Sproul and Mr. Shoup, of the Southern Pacific, knew it long ago. At a luncheon in San Francisco given by Herbert Fleishhacker, Mr. Sproul said: "I never thought as hard in my life as I did the other day, when I saw an airplane come down at the edge of the Pacific, having left the Atlantic less than 24 hours before."

Some railroad men are thinking. These pictures may help them to think harder. Also they will encourage the public to believe that cheaper, quicker transportation is coming.

The railroad is cheaper than was the stage coach. And it makes more money than the stage coach did, a thousand to one.

Flying machines will be infinitely cheaper than today's fast express. But will make more money, costing less to operate. And railroads will make up their passenger loss with increased freights.

Gen. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania, and Mr. Storey, president of the Santa Fe, know it, and have combined for a cross-country, part air, part Pullman car service, Pullman cars at night, airplanes by day.

The New York Central also has arranged for combination Pullman car and air flight.

Later it will be all air, at least for long flights.
